Welcome to Kazakhstan

Highlights

In 2023, Kazakhstan's GDP grew by 5.1%, while the 2024 economic forecast anticipates a growth slowdown to 3.4%. This growth was largely attributable to the 6% increase in oil production. Consumer confidence remained high despite stagnant incomes and tight monetary policy, as evidenced by retail (7%, real terms), car sales (8%), and new business registration (10%). Capital investment rose, predominantly in non-resource sectors (80%).¹ In the structure of wages by type of economic activity, the largest shares are wholesale and retail trade; repair of motor vehicles and motorcycles (20.8%), manufacturing (10.9%), and mining and quarrying (9.4%).²

02

Lower growth expectations for 2024 reflect reduced oil production forecast due to maintenance at major fields and Kazakhstan's adherence to OPEC+ production cuts. Inflation is likely to decrease but stay over the 5% target, affected by utility tariff hikes and potential budget deficits. The non-oil sector's growth and better tax collection will boost non-oil revenue. The government plans to reduce spending to the pre-crisis levels, aligning with fiscal rules.³

03

The outlook faces downside risks. Lower growth in major trading partners like China and the EU could substantially worsen Kazakhstan's outlook, as would the weakening of oil prices. Stubborn inflation and the increased likelihood of climate-related shocks risk setting back poverty reduction progress. Disruptions to oil exports, such as unexpected maintenance in existing fields or delays in oil production coming online from the new Tengiz oilfield, could hinder oil output and economic growth. Lastly, there are risks to growth arising from the geopolitical situation and trade flows with Russia. Slowing food prices and tight monetary policy helped ease price pressure. In February 2024, inflation decelerated to 9.3 percent yoy from a peak of 21.3 percent a year ago, but inflation expectations remain elevated. In line with the recent reversal in price dynamics, in February 2024, the Central Bank cut the policy rate by 0.5 percent to 14.75 percent.

04

While unemployment decreased slightly from 4.9 percent in 2022 to 4.7 percent in 2023, real incomes contracted 0.3 percent yoy due to high inflation.

To ease the burden on living standards, the authorities once again raised the minimum wage, by 21.4 percent in nominal terms in 2023. This effectively doubled its level from 2021 (70 percent, real terms), exceeding inflation over the same period, and it helped to reduce the poverty rate to 8.8 percent (at USD 6.85/day) in 2023.

Slowing food prices and tight monetary policy helped ease price pressure.

In February 2024, inflation decelerated to 9.3 percent YoY from a peak of 21.3 percent a year ago, but inflation expectations remain elevated. In line with the recent reversal in price dynamics, in February 2024, the Central Bank cut the policy rate by 0.5 percent to 14.75 percent.

06

Kazakhstan's growth has slowed from 10 percent over 2000-2007 to below 4% over the last 10 years, highlighting the vulnerabilities of an economy still dependent on hydrocarbons and with stagnant productivity growth. Looking ahead, adjusting to the global green transition presents significant challenges for Kazakhstan. Revitalizing economic growth and productivity will require bolder steps to enable the private sector to thrive and drive economic diversification by reducing the state's footprint and boosting competition across the economy, complemented with strengthening human capital and policies to support decarbonization.

07

Foreign direct investment in Kazakhstan increased by USD 3.7 billion in the fourth quarter of 2023. Foreign direct investment in Kazakhstan averaged USD 4.6 billion from 2001 until 2023, reaching an all-time high of USD 8.28 billion in the third quarter of 2022 and a record low of USD 864.32 million in the first quarter of 2002. Kazakhstan boasts a foreign trade turnover of USD 101.5 billion and has attracted USD 431 billion in investments over 30 years. It is also the largest uranium producer in the world and holds significant chromium reserves. Investments are not limited to oil and gas; significant funds have been directed to mining, manufacturing, agriculture, trade, technical activities, transportation, logistics, tourism, and energy sectors.⁴

08

In July 2018, Kazakhstan officially launched the Astana International Financial Centre (AIFC) on the site of the EXPO-2017 exhibition. It is set to serve as a financial hub for Central Asia, the Caucasus, the Eurasian Economic Union and Mongolia. Participants enjoy special tax, currency and visa regimes, as well as a favorable framework for attracting foreign labor. The tax regime offers nearly 50-year CIT, VAT and PIT exemptions for foreign employees. In total, more than 1,500 AIFC participants were registered. The top five international jurisdictions with the biggest presence in the AIFC are China (9%), the European Union (6%), Russia (6%), the United Kingdom (3%) and the United States (3%).

Kazakh Invest supports 200 projects worth USD 27.3 billion with the creation of 68,800 jobs. More than 40 projects with foreign participation are expected to be launched this year.⁵

10

A gas processing plant with a capacity of 1 billion m³ of gas per year will be built at the Kashagan oilfield. Construction of a gas processing plant with a capacity of 1 billion m³ per year in the Atyrau region began in May 2023. The initiator of the project (estimated at USD 860 million by the Ministry of Energy, and at USD 1.2 billion by other sources) was GPC Investment LLP, a private company. The company will be able to produce 815 million m³ per year of commercial gas, 119 thousand tons of liquefied gas, 212 thousand tons of sulfur and 35 thousand tons of gas condensate. Commissioning is scheduled for the second quarter of 2025.⁶

Legislative functions are performed by the Parliament of Kazakhstan, which is the supreme representative body and consists of two chambers, the Senate and the Majilis. The Government of Kazakhstan acts as the supreme executive body, headed by the Prime Minister. Judicial authority is vested in the Supreme Court.

Tax tips

01

Kazakhstan's law has been subject to frequent changes, making it important for businesses to have robust tax planning to cope with changes in the law and implement structural modifications as required without significant tax costs.

02

In Kazakhstan, corporate and personal income tax rates are low by international standards, but penalties for non-payment and non-reporting, whether intentional or not, are high. The primary focus of tax planning in Kazakhstan should be to confirm that all tax that ought to be paid in Kazakhstan is paid and reported. In addition, Kazakhstan is a documentation-driven country, and keeping documentation in order (including supporting documentation) is of paramount importance.

03

The scope of withholding taxes (WHTs) on cross-border payments is wide, and rates are high (sometimes even when the recipient has never entered Kazakhstan). However, Kazakhstan has double tax treaties with many countries which allow for withholding taxes to be reduced or avoided if all the necessary documentation is in place. Additionally, compliance with the requirements proposed by the Multilateral Convention to Implement Tax Treaty Related Measures to Prevent Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (MLI) should also be considered. The MLI was enacted in Kazakhstan on 1 October 2020, and it has been in force for WHT since 1 January 2021.

04

There are many downsides to dealing with tax havens when structuring cross-border investments or transactions in Kazakhstan. Thus, tax havens should not usually be part of tax planning in Kazakhstan.

05

The rules for determining whether a business dealing with Kazakhstan has a taxable presence for corporate income tax (CIT) purposes in Kazakhstan (a permanent establishment) are very broad and can apply collectively to whole groups of companies if they have been in the country for over six months. Some, but not all, of Kazakhstan's tax treaties (with MLI limitations) protect against this. Therefore, if more than one group entity is used to do business in Kazakhstan, the position of all entities involved should be reviewed collectively.

06

The deductibility of interest on investor loans is subject to a debt-to-equity ratio of 4:1 (7:1 for financial organizations). At best, an investor will pay 10% WHT on cross-border interest (under a double tax treaty) and be able to claim a CIT deduction of 20%, while for certain borrowings accrued interest expense may be deducted only when paid. Furthermore, exchange gains and losses on loans are recognized for tax purposes.

07

There is a safe harbor allowing an entity that second staff to Kazakhstan to avoid a taxable presence. Provided the arrangements are properly structured, this is likely to be more tax-efficient than using the same staff to provide consulting or other services.

08

Branch profit tax applies to all permanent establishments of foreign legal entities at a standard rate of 15%. It is usually reduced by tax treaties. There is an equivalent tax on dividends at the same standard rate, which may also be reduced by treaties (with MLI limitations). In the case of dividends that were taxed with CIT, the rate is 10% after an investment has been held for three years, except for investments in oil and gas or mining operations (unless a certain portion of minerals is refined), dividends paid to entities registered in tax havens and investments in certain CIT-exempt entities.

09

In many cases, an exemption from capital gains tax may be obtained upon withdrawal from an investment in Kazakhstan, provided that the correct structuring was used when the investment was first made. The complexity of the structuring depends on the asset's nature.

10

According to the currently enacted tax law, income received by foreign individuals (cash and in-kind) for work performed in Kazakhstan (regardless of where the income is paid) is treated as Kazakhstan-source income and is subject to Kazakhstan's personal income tax (PIT). Generally, Kazakhstan-source income is reported and taxed in Kazakhstan using one of the following methods: (i) self-assessment via an annual PIT return or (ii) at source via a local company acting as a so-called "tax agent". In most cases, the law places tax and reporting obligations for Kazakhstan-source income of foreign individuals on a local tax agent, e.g., a foreign legal entity with a registered presence in Kazakhstan (a branch or a representative office) or a local entity that uses a non-resident employer's services delivered through foreign employees.

Legal tips

01

Most investors use a Kazakh limited liability partnership (LLP) as their investment vehicle.

02

Settlements between residents of Kazakhstan (e.g., Kazakh legal entities, branches/representative offices of foreign non-financial entities, Kazakh citizens and, recently, branches/representative offices of foreign entities found to constitute a PE in Kazakhstan) must be made in KZT (with a few exceptions: e.g., branches of non-financial entities may transact with each other in a foreign currency). Settlements between non-residents (e.g., foreign legal entities and citizens and branches/representative offices of foreign entities that do not have a PE in Kazakhstan) and Kazakh residents may generally be made in any currency but may have to be reported to the National Bank if they reach certain thresholds.

03

An extensive range of business and professional activities are subject to licensing requirements, and it is important for investors to determine in advance whether they need a license. The penalties for failure to obtain a license can be significant, including potential criminal liability.

04

Kazakhstan often takes a formalistic approach to procedural matters. In most cases, a company's representatives must have a detailed power of attorney and will regularly be required to refer to it, e.g., when signing contracts and filing applications with various government authorities.

05

Compliance with local content requirements is very important for mining and oil and gas companies and their subcontractors and is constantly monitored by government authorities.

06

The process of hiring foreign employees is complex and strictly regulated in Kazakhstan. Immigration and labor laws have undergone numerous changes resulting in frequent inspections of companies that employ foreign workers and increased penalties for violations of labor and migration rules (including discriminatory terms of remuneration and payment of salaries in foreign currency).

07

Kazakhstan generally permits foreign law to be the governing law for commercial contracts, except for subsurface use contracts with the state, foundation agreements of a Kazakh legal entity, agreements on the transfer of participating interests in a legal entity and transactions involving immovable property.

08

There is a special legal regime for companies registered as the AIFC participants. Regulatory acts of the AIFC governing relations between the AIFC participants may be based on the “principles, norms and cases” of the law of England and Wales and standards of international financial centers.

09

In certain cases, the law of Kazakhstan requires the government authorities' approval for the acquisition of shares/ participating interests in legal entities operating in fields covered by competition and natural monopoly regulations and by legislation relating to subsurface use. It is therefore important to analyze the requirements of Kazakh laws on a case-by-case basis before entering into such transactions.

10

Disputes between Kazakh legal entities are resolved either through amicable procedures (mediation, amicable settlement and participatory procedure) or by courts and local arbitration, as well as by international arbitration and foreign courts (with certain exceptions) if a provision allowing such dispute resolution is contained in the relevant agreement between the parties. Public disputes with Kazakhstan's government authorities can be resolved either in court or through a pre-litigation procedure.

At the same time, Kazakh legal entities have access to the AIFC's court and international arbitration center, whose decisions are recognized and enforced in Kazakhstan similarly to international arbitration awards.

Getting started

Arriving in Kazakhstan

The Kazakh authorities issue visas of the following categories:

- Category A: diplomatic, official and investor visa
- Category B (long-term stay and short-term stay): business visa, visa for international road haulage, visa for crew members of aircraft, marine and river vessels and trains, visa for religious events, visa for practical training or internships, visa for permanent residence in Kazakhstan, private visa, visa for adoption of Kazakh citizens, tourist visa, transit visa and exit visa for leaving Kazakhstan
- Category C (long-term stay): visa for permanent residence in Kazakhstan (for ethnic Kazakhs), family reunion visa, work visa, visa for missionary activities, humanitarian visa, study visa, private visa (for ethnic Kazakhs), visa for minors and medical treatment visa

Visas of these categories may be issued for a single or multiple entry, depending on the visa category and type. Exit visas are issued only for single use.

Business visas (Category B) are issued to foreign individuals arriving in Kazakhstan for business purposes (e.g., negotiations, conclusion of contracts, provision of consulting or audit services, provision of installation, repair or maintenance services and attendance at conferences, symposiums, forums, exhibitions, and concerts).

Work visas (Category C) are issued to foreign individuals entering or staying in Kazakhstan for employment and members of their families. In general, a work visa is issued based on a work permit. See the “Work permits” section for details.

In Kazakhstan, visas are issued by the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MIA) of Kazakhstan. Elsewhere, they are issued by Kazakh consulates (e.g., the Consular Section of the Embassy of Kazakhstan). Business and work visas are issued based on a letter of invitation issued by a local Kazakh company or a branch or a representative office of a foreign company. The state duty for processing invitations is 0.5 times the monthly calculation index (MCI). The fee for issuing a visa ranges from USD 20 to USD 1,000 depending on the country of residence of the invited party and the type of visa requested. A visa should be issued within five business days; however, in practice, it may take longer.

An individual may obtain certain types of official business and private visas without a letter of invitation by submitting a written application to the Kazakh consular establishment in the respective country if such individual is a citizen of one of the following countries:

Under this visa-free regime, citizens of the above countries may enter Kazakhstan without a visa for a period not exceeding 30 calendar days after crossing the border and may spend a total of no more than 90 calendar days in the country in each 180-calendar day period. This rule does not apply to foreign individuals who have obtained a temporary residence permit as described below. If a foreign individual wishes to stay in Kazakhstan for a longer period, he or she may apply for a single-entry business or investor visa while in Kazakhstan. Investor visas are issued to certain categories of business immigration applicants (managers of companies that carry out investment activities in Kazakhstan and members of their families) and provide certain privileges.

Post-arrival procedures

Notification of the immigration authorities upon arrival of a foreign individual in Kazakhstan

As a rule, regardless of the citizenship of a foreign individual, the host entity should notify the immigration authorities of the arrival of foreign individuals in Kazakhstan within 3 business days after the date of their arrival. Also, a notification should be submitted to the immigration authorities if a foreign individual changes his or her temporary residence address in Kazakhstan (e.g., any change of the hotel/apartment, any change of the address due to a business trip, any move to another region for working purposes).

Immigration records are kept by the MIA based on the information from inviting parties and by the National Security Committee of Kazakhstan based on the information from Kazakh border control authorities.

Temporary residence permit

Foreign individuals exempt from a visa and arriving in Kazakhstan for more than 30 calendar days (after the date of their arrival) are required to obtain a temporary residence permit (TRP) from the Public Services.

A TRP allows a foreign individual to stay for a specific period (e.g., the duration of an employment agreement) and must be obtained by the inviting party. A TRP is issued based on the applications from:

1. Individuals inviting foreign individuals to reunite families
2. Individuals or legal entities that have concluded an employment agreement with a foreign individual
3. Educational organizations
4. Medical organizations
5. Religious organizations
6. Local authorities inviting individuals to engage in entrepreneurial activities (business immigrants)

The period of stay in Kazakhstan ends upon the expiry of the visa or, for visa-free visitors, after 30 calendar days or the period indicated in the TRP.

There are various sanctions for non-compliance with immigration requirements. Please refer to the relevant section for details.

Should you require assistance in planning and managing your human capital needs, EY can assist you with business and work visas, work permit applications for foreign employees, tax registration, tax and legal compliance for expatriate individuals and structuring secondment arrangements.

Types of legal entities

Under the Civil Code, foreign and local investors may use a number of vehicles to do business in Kazakhstan, including simple partnerships, limited liability partnerships, additional liability partnerships, production cooperatives and joint stock companies.

In this section, we provide more details on the types of business vehicles that are most widely used in practice.

Joint stock companies (JSCs)

A JSC is a legal entity that issues shares for attracting investments to finance its activities. A JSC is separate and distinct from its shareholders – i.e., as a rule, shareholders are not liable for a JSC's liabilities. It may have one or more shareholders. The minimum capital required for a JSC is 50,000 MCI (KZT 184,600,000; approximately USD 388,632).

Limited liability partnerships (LLPs)

The main difference between a JSC and an LLP is that an LLP does not issue shares; instead, participants hold interests in the partnership's charter capital. An LLP may be formed by one or more participants. Generally, the participants in an LLP are not liable for the LLP's debts beyond the value of their contributions to the charter capital.

The minimum charter capital requirement for an LLP is 100 MCI (KZT 369,200; approximately USD 777), except for small business enterprises, whose minimum is set at zero. The participants' interests are proportional to their contributions to the charter capital, unless the foundation documents provide otherwise. The participants have pre-emptive rights to each other's participatory interests when those are being sold.

Importantly, in Kazakhstan, LLPs are separate legal entities that are distinct from their participants. As a legal entity, an LLP is subject to state registration and taxation in its own right, i.e., it is not tax transparent.

In addition, Kazakhstan's law allows a foreign company to establish branches and representative offices. Under the Civil Code, branches and representative offices are structural subdivisions of the company rather than separate legal entities.

Representative offices

A representative office is established to represent a foreign entity's interests in Kazakhstan. A representative office protects and represents the interests of a foreign legal entity and carries out preparatory and auxiliary activities, such as marketing and advertising. Generally, a representative office may not engage in commercial activities.

Branches

A branch is a subdivision of a foreign legal entity that performs all or part of a foreign entity's functions. In particular, it may engage in commercial activities.

Should you require more information on the nature and uses of the various types of business entities in Kazakhstan, EY offers tax and legal advice on how to structure a business, as well as a full range of company formation and registration services.

Establishing a legal presence

As a rule, in Kazakhstan, all legal entities, branches and representative offices must be registered in Kazakhstan. It is important to determine whether any specific approvals and/or consents must be obtained from government authorities before proceeding to state registration.

State registration

In Kazakhstan, state registration follows a “one-stop shop” principle: all registration documents are submitted to a single government authority, which is NJSC State Corporation “Government for Citizens”. Under the law on state registration, the procedure should take from 1 to 3 business days. In practice, general registration can take up to one month.

The law prescribes a standard set of documents that should be submitted for the state registration of a company. Having all the right documents is key to a successful registration process. It is essential to ensure that the documents have been duly signed, sealed, notarized and legalized, or apostilled if they were executed abroad; otherwise, the registration process may be considerably delayed.

The state registration fee is currently 6.5 MCI (KZT 23,998; approximately USD 51).

A micro-, small- or medium-sized legal entity can be registered by submitting an electronic application filled in by the founder(s) of the legal entity on the e-government web portal (www.egov.kz). However, this option requires that the founders have properly issued digital signatures in Kazakhstan.

Location (legal address)

A legal entity's location is the address indicated in its foundation documents (e.g., its charter and foundation agreement, if applicable). Under Kazakh law, a legal entity is located in the same place as its permanent governing body (i.e., its director or board of directors). Location plays an important part in a legal entity's registration and other legal events, such as the determination of the court of competent jurisdiction in case of a lawsuit against such entity (usually a court in the defendant's location) and the state revenue authority to which tax and other payments must be made.

Under Kazakh law, government authorities, including state revenue authorities, require legal entities, branches and representative offices (“entities”) to be present at the legal addresses indicated in their foundation documents and registration records. The state revenue authorities may visit them at their legal address under an “observation procedure”.

If entities are not actually present at their legal address, i.e., the state revenue authorities cannot find anyone representing an entity at the time of observation, the entity may face adverse consequences, such as deregistration for VAT purposes, or freezing of its bank accounts. It is therefore important for entities to be actually present at the legal address stated in their foundation documents and registration records, or at least to ensure that, if the authorities visit (or if they send correspondence or call the contact telephone number), there is someone who can confirm the presence of the entity at that address.

According to Kazakh law, those entities that have not been present at their registered address for one year or more may be liquidated/deregistered based on a court decision.

Opening a bank account (legal entities and individuals)

In Kazakhstan, bank accounts may be opened with a local bank in the national currency and/or a foreign currency. Generally, branches and representative offices of foreign legal entities may opt to use foreign bank accounts along with local bank accounts. Kazakh legal entities are permitted to hold bank accounts outside Kazakhstan without restrictions.

Under currency law, the rules for notifying the National Bank of Kazakhstan of the opening of a bank account with a foreign bank are as follows:

- Kazakh legal entities and their branches and representative offices are required to notify the National Bank of Kazakhstan of the opening of a bank account abroad by applying for a registration number to be assigned to the bank account by the National Bank of Kazakhstan.
- Kazakh legal entities and their branches and representative offices are required to provide the National Bank of Kazakhstan with information on any transactions on the bank accounts held with foreign banks.
- Kazakh legal entities and their branches and representative offices are required to notify the National Bank of Kazakhstan of the closure of or changes in the details of the bank accounts held abroad.

Individual residents of Kazakhstan are not required to notify the National Bank of Kazakhstan of any bank accounts opened with foreign banks. Second-tier banks notify the National Bank of Kazakhstan of money transfers made from the resident individuals' local bank accounts to their foreign bank accounts.

See the “Banking regulations” and “Currency regulations” sections for more details.

Categories of work immigrants, work permits and secondment

The Law of the Republic of Kazakhstan On Migration of 22 July 2011 establishes the following categories of immigrants entering the country for employment purposes:

- Foreign immigrant workers, i.e., persons who come to Kazakhstan to engage in independently arranged employment in high-demand occupations in priority economic sectors (business areas) and persons who are engaged by employers to work in Kazakhstan, including by intra-corporate transfer.
- Business immigrants, i.e., persons who come to engage in entrepreneurial activities in accordance with Kazakh law.
- Seasonal foreign workers, i.e., immigrants hired to perform seasonal work during specific periods (seasons) determined by climatic or other natural conditions, but not for more than one year.

- Labor immigrants who come to Kazakhstan as domestic workers to perform household-based work (services) for individuals (employers) under a labor immigrant permit.

Work permits

There are two types of permits allowing foreign individuals to work in Kazakhstan:

- A permit to engage foreign labor
- A permit issued to a foreign individual who independently came to Kazakhstan to work in a particular occupation. The Kazakh government approves the list of such occupations

In Kazakhstan, as in many other countries, employers are required to obtain a permit to employ foreign citizens.

There is a reasonable amount of flexibility in the process of hiring foreigners in Kazakhstan. Unlike many countries, where employers are required to sign employment contracts with foreign nationals to hire them as local employees, Kazakhstan offers different options, including (i) employing a foreigner directly as a local employee, (ii) engaging foreign specialists under a service contract with a foreign contractor not present in Kazakhstan (including secondment agreements, which are commonly used around the world), and

(iii) transferring a foreigner to a local branch/representative office/subsidiary from a parent company based in a WTO country (intra-corporate transfer). A work permit is obtained by submitting documents to the local authorities under one of the two procedures: the standard procedure or intra-corporate transfer procedure. The latter option is available because Kazakhstan is a member of the World Trade Organization (WTO).

Standard procedure

Work permits are issued by local authorities within the quota allocated by the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection on an annual basis. This quota is the maximum number of foreign individuals who can be hired to work in Kazakhstan in particular regions. Quotas are determined mainly based on annual applications that employers are required to submit by 1 October.

For the purposes of work permits issued under the standard procedure, foreign individuals are divided into the following categories:

- Category 1: CEOs and Deputy CEOs of companies
- Category 2: Leaders of business divisions/departments
- Category 3: Professionals
- Category 4: Skilled workers

However, there is a restriction on the number of foreign employees who may be hired by a specific employer/local host entity – the so-called “ratio requirement”. Currently, the total number of foreign employees of a Kazakh employer/local host entity must not exceed:

- 30% of the total number of Category 1 and 2 employees
- 10% of the total number of Category 3 and 4 employees

This ratio requirement does not apply to permits issued to small businesses, state enterprises and agencies, self-employed foreign individuals, permits issued within the quotas for particular countries of origin and permits issued to branches and representative offices of foreign legal entities with no more than 10 employees.

To obtain a work permit, each foreign individual must meet the set qualification requirements.

A work permit under the standard procedure is issued for the following duration:

- Category 1: 1, 2 and 3 years with annual extensions of 1, 2 or 3 years
- Category 2: 12 months with annual extension of 12 months, but no more than 3 times
- Category 3: 12 months with annual extension of 12 months, but no more than 3 times
- Category 4: 12 months with no option to extend

An employer is charged a state duty when a work permit is issued or extended. The amount of the duty is established by the Government of Kazakhstan and ranges from approximately USD 1,000 to USD 3,600, depending on the employer's industry and the employee's category.

Intra-corporate transfer

An intra-corporate transfer (ICT) is a temporary transfer of a foreign individual from a legal entity established in a WTO state other than Kazakhstan to a branch, a subsidiary, or a representative office in Kazakhstan. For obtaining a work permit under ICT, foreign individuals are classified as:

- Specialists
- Managers
- Executives

Under the ratio requirement for ICT, the number of foreign employees must not exceed 50% of the total number of managers and specialists of a branch/representative office/subsidiary in Kazakhstan. No ratio requirement applies to executives. A foreign individual engaged under ICT remains employed by the home company but must comply with the requirements of the host employer in terms of work schedule and health and safety requirements. The foreign individual must meet the qualification requirements and have at least one year of work experience with an entity based in a WTO member state. Local authorities issue a work permit under an ICT for the transfer period, but not more than 3 years (36 months), with the option to extend it once by 1 year (12 months).

ICT-based work permits are issued free of state duties and are not subject to the foreign labor quota.

However, before hiring a foreign specialist to work in Kazakhstan under the ICT option, the local host entity is required to carry out a search for suitable candidates on the Kazakh labor market and obtain a work permit only if no suitable candidates have been found. For each manager or specialist work permit received under the ICT option, the employer is required to meet one of a number of special conditions (e.g., creation of new jobs for Kazakh citizens, training of Kazakh citizens, etc.). No special conditions are imposed on the host company when executives are hired.

Work permit exemptions

To encourage foreign investment, Kazakhstan offers various exemptions from the requirement to obtain work permits for foreign workers. Exemptions apply, for instance, to:

- Business immigrants who come to Kazakhstan to engage in entrepreneurial activities (special conditions apply)
- Heads of local branches or representative offices of foreign companies and heads of local wholly foreign-owned companies and their deputies
- Heads of companies that have entered into agreements with the Government of Kazakhstan to invest more than USD 50 million in the country and heads of local companies running investment projects in key industries under agreements with local competent authorities
- Nationals of member countries of the Eurasian Economic Union, regardless of their position or the duration of their employment in Kazakhstan
- Foreign nationals engaged by the participants or the bodies of the Astana International Finance Centre (the AIFC)
- Individuals working in Astana Hub, an international technology park, or hired by the park's participants as managers and professionals with higher education
- Managers and professionals with higher education working either with local companies that have entered into contracts to implement investment projects in priority areas or with companies in the architectural, urban planning and construction industries that have been contracted by such investors, for the period until the end of the first year after the commissioning date of the project facility, or as skilled workers in accordance with the list of occupations and employee numbers approved as part of investment contracts

- Employees of companies registered in one of Kazakhstan's 10 free economic zones (FEZs) to implement projects worth more than 1 million MCI or companies contracted by an FEZ resident, for the period of construction and installation work in the FEZ and during the first year after the commissioning date of the project facility, in accordance with the list of employee categories and numbers approved by a special committee of competent authorities
- Individuals working in a national management holding company in positions not lower than heads of departments who have higher education and possess the required supporting documents
- Employees sent on business trips for a period of 120 calendar days during a calendar year
- Individuals engaged to work as members of the board of directors of a national management holding company

Liability for non-compliance with immigration law

The law of Kazakhstan imposes severe sanctions on Kazakhstan's entities for non-compliance with immigration law. Administrative sanctions imposed on a company may be as high as USD 7,100 (per foreign individual, per violation). In the worst-case scenario, the individual may be subjected to administrative detention for up to 15 days or administrative deportation from the country, and the company may be banned from hiring foreigners for up to 1 year, i.e., no work permits will be issued and invitations from the company will not be accepted for visa applications in the said period.

In addition, a foreign individual must personally appear in administrative court in connection with an immigration offence. Such foreign individuals are not allowed to enter Kazakhstan for 5 years after their administrative deportation from Kazakhstan.

Residence permits

Kazakhstan issues residence permits. There is no quota system for immigration into Kazakhstan under residence permits. Work permit requirements do not apply to holders of residence permits.

Family members

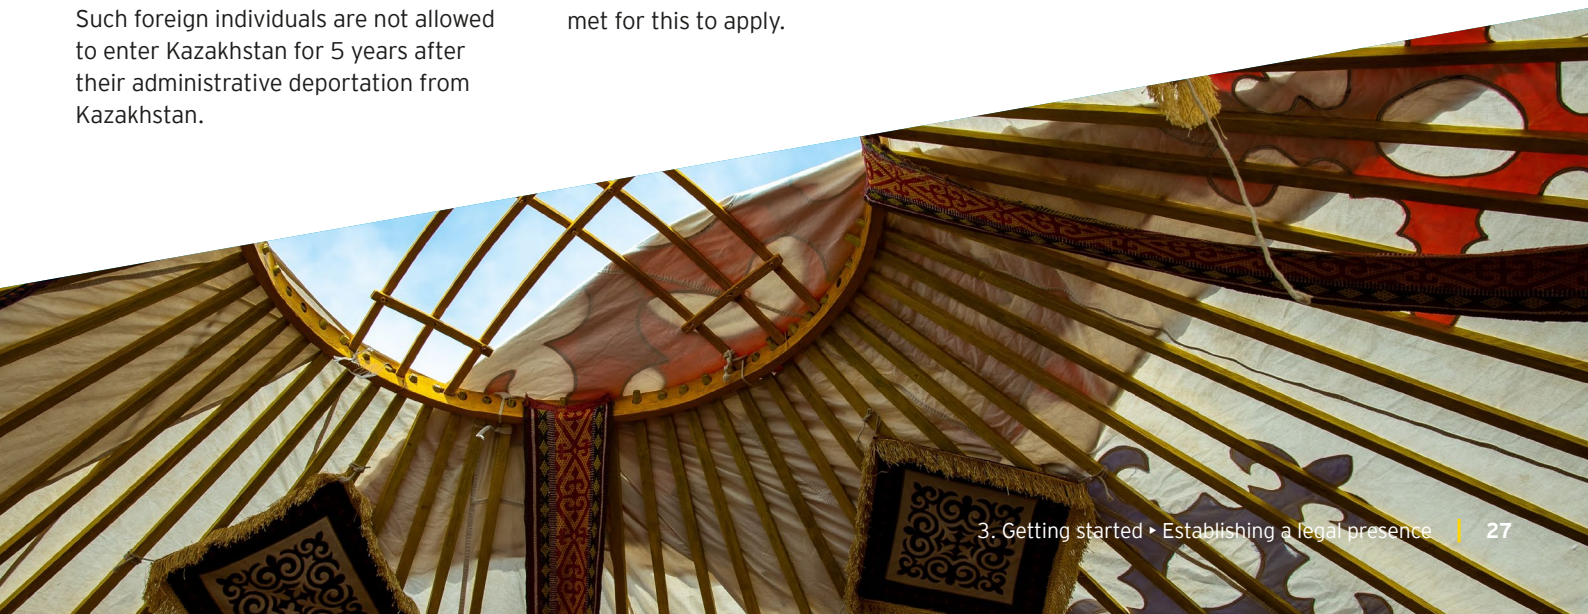

The spouse of a holder of a Kazakh work permit does not automatically receive the same type of work permit. If he or she wishes to find employment, a work permit application must be filed independently.

Secondment

The Tax Code includes a safe harbor provision pursuant to which a foreign entity providing secondees from outside Kazakhstan may be exempt from WHT in Kazakhstan. Certain conditions need to be met for this to apply.

Under secondment, the local host company acts as a tax agent in relation to the seconded personnel's income and is responsible for shadow payroll tax calculation and reporting, including personal income tax and social tax liabilities. However, it is important to note that, in addition to tax law, secondment must also comply with relevant Kazakhstan's labor law requirements.

EY can assist with (i) structuring a secondment arrangement that meets the applicable legislative requirements, (ii) drafting secondment agreements and other mandatory documents, and (iii) applying for required permits, registration, etc., in Kazakhstan.

Incentives for investors

To create a favorable investment climate, Kazakhstan provides various benefits for investors depending on their area of activity.

Investment contract

For enjoying certain investment incentives, an investor must enter into an investment contract with the Investment Committee of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Kazakhstan (the “Committee”). The form of the investment contract is approved by a government resolution.

It is important to note that the investment contract is concluded with a Kazakh legal entity, which may be a subsidiary of a foreign company. The term of the investment contract is determined by the effective period of the investment incentives to be provided.

The Entrepreneurial Code of Kazakhstan specifies three types of projects that may be implemented under investment contracts:

1. Regular investment projects involving the creation of new production facilities or the expansion and upgrading of the existing ones, including the facilities created, expanded and/or upgraded during the implementation of public-private partnership projects, including concession projects

2. Priority investment projects involving the creation of new production facilities with investments of no less than 2,000,000 MCI (KZT 7,384,000,000; approximately USD 15,545,263) or the expansion and upgrading of the existing production facilities with investments of no less than 5,000,000 MCI (KZT 18,460,000,000; approximately USD 38,863,158)
3. Special investment projects implemented by legal entities registered as participants of special economic zones, or by owners of a free warehouse, or by legal entities that have entered into an agreement on the industrial assembly of motor vehicles

All such investment projects must fall within the list of priority areas of activity approved by the Government of Kazakhstan. Below we outline the types of incentives provided to investors, depending on the type of the investment project:

1. Regular investment projects
 - Exemption from customs duties
 - Exemption from import VAT
 - In-kind grants (free land lease, title to land plots and equipment) up to a value of 30% of total investment

2. Priority investment projects
 - Exemption from customs duties
 - In-kind grants (free land lease, title to land plots and equipment) up to a value of 30% of total investment
 - Tax incentives, specifically:
 - 100% CIT relief for up to 10 years for new production facilities and 3 years for the modernization of production facilities
 - zero rate of land tax for up to 10 years
 - zero rate of property tax for up to 8 years
3. Special investment projects
 - Exemption from customs duties
 - Exemption from import VAT

Investment agreements

The Tax Code provides investment incentives under investment agreements if an entity meets all the following criteria:

- It enters into an investment agreement with the authorized state body.
- It implements an investment project in the areas specified in the list of priority activities approved by the government.
- It is not a person carrying out restricted types of activities (e.g., subsurface use, banking, production of excisable goods, etc.).
- It does not apply special tax regimes.

Entities that conclude investment agreements may enjoy the following tax benefits (subject to certain criteria being met):

- 100% CIT relief for up to 10 years
- Zero rate of land tax for up to 10 years
- Zero rate of property tax for up to 8 years
- VAT exemption for supplies of goods, work and services in an SEZ
- Reduction of CIT, land tax and property tax liabilities in a total amount not exceeding 20% of a taxpayer's actual expenses (if envisaged by the investment agreement) for investment projects of not less than approximately USD 117,000,000 applicable after 10 years of usage of tax benefits within the term of the investment agreement (not exceeding 25 years)

Investment commitment agreement

The Tax Code currently provides investment incentives under an investment commitment agreement if an entity meets all the following criteria:

- It enters into an investment commitment agreement with the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
- It is an export-oriented commodity producer, except for exporters of hydrocarbons and oil products.
- It is a large or medium enterprise.
- It does not engage in the production of excisable goods.
- It does not apply special tax regimes

Investment preferences granted under an investment commitment agreement include:

- Stability of the tax regime, which in general terms means that the investor is immune from changes in tax laws and enjoys the benefits of the legislation in effect as of the date of the investment commitment agreement for a period of 10 years (except for the following taxes and payments to the budget: VAT, excise tax, payments for environmental emissions, PIT and WHT, which should be calculated in accordance with the tax regime effective as of the date when such tax liabilities arise).

Agreement on the processing of solid minerals

The Subsurface Use Code currently provides investment incentives for subsurface users that implement a priority investment project involving the processing of solid minerals in Kazakhstan and have concluded the relevant agreements with the Committee.

To enjoy the investment incentives, subsurface users must invest no less than approximately USD 54,620,000 and apply to the Committee to conclude an agreement on the processing of solid minerals through a negotiation and appraisal process. It should be noted that only one processing agreement may be concluded for one and the same mineral processing project or production facility.

Furthermore, the state grants investment incentives based on the principle of reciprocity, i.e., the subsurface user may be required to fulfill a number of social and investment obligations, such as:

- Creation and preservation of jobs for citizens of the Republic of Kazakhstan in the extractive and/or processing industries
- Creation, expansion and/or modernization of processing facilities
- Fulfilment of obligations relating to the volume and level of solid minerals processing

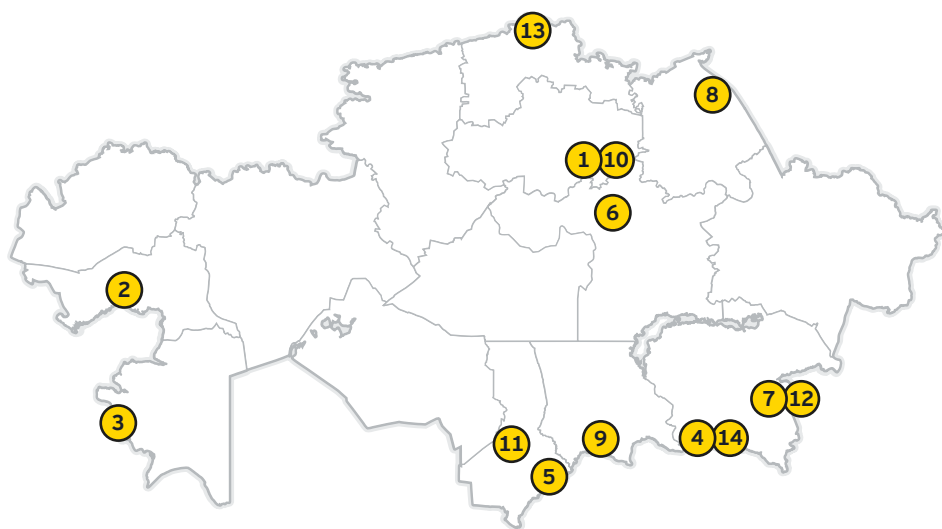

- Fulfilment of obligations relating to the volume of products sold as raw materials to the entities operating on the domestic market
- Financing of programs of Kazakh educational institutions to train specialists in environmental protection and applied sciences
- Financing of the construction and/or reconstruction of social and/or cultural facilities

The termination of an agreement on the solid minerals processing also entails the termination of the investment incentives granted.

Special economic zones

Special economic zones (SEZ) are specialized territories of Kazakhstan with defined boundaries and a special regulatory regime designed to support certain priority activities. The list of priority activities is established by the Order of the Minister of Industry and Construction. The order specifies priority activities for 14 (fourteen) different SEZs in Kazakhstan:

1. Astana – New City (Astana): construction of industrial facilities and infrastructure
2. National Industrial Petrochemical Technopark (Atyrau region): manufacture of petrochemical products and construction of industrial facilities

3. Seaport Aktau (Mangystau region): metallurgy and construction of industrial facilities
4. Park of Innovative Technologies (Almaty): IT services
5. Ontustik (Turkistan region): production of textiles and other materials

AIFC

The AIFC was established to provide a favorable environment for investors in the financial sector. So far, the AIFC has succeeded in its main mission to become a hub for foreign and local investors and various financial, market and ancillary service providers by establishing its own set of laws and a legal framework by analogy to those of well-known international financial centers, such as the Dubai International Financial Centre. There are two options for establishing a legal presence in the AIFC:

1. Registration of a new legal entity
2. Recognition of existing legal entities as the AIFC participants

New AIFC legal entities may be registered in forms that are similar to those provided for in common law jurisdictions, such as:

- Limited Partnership
- Limited Liability Partnership
- General Partnership
- Private Company
- Public Company
- Investment Company
- Special-Purpose Company
- Non-Profit Incorporated Organization
- Protected Cell Company
- Restricted Scope Company
- Foundation

Foreign partnerships and companies may be registered with the AIFC in the following legal forms:

- Recognized Company
- Recognized General Partnership
- Recognized Limited Partnership
- Recognized Limited Liability Partnership

Certain activities, such as financial services, market activities and ancillary services (legal, audit, accounting, consulting, credit rating) are required to be licensed by the financial regulator of the AIFC – the Astana Financial Services Authority (the “AFSA”).

The AIFC participants may enjoy the following benefits (subject to certain criteria being met):

- CIT exemption until 1 January 2066 for certain financial services that are specified in the AIFC law and provided within the AIFC
- PIT exemption until 1 January 2066 for foreign employees of the AIFC participants working under local employment agreement who provide the abovementioned financial services
- CIT and PIT exemption until 1 January 2066 on dividends and capital gains from publicly listed securities and shares of the licensed AIFC participants
- VAT exemption for certain financial services that are specified in the AIFC law and provided within the AIFC

- Exemption from property tax
- Exemption from land tax
- Simplified visa regime for foreign citizens coming to Kazakhstan to work for the AIFC participants, such as the option of receiving an entry visa at the Embassy of Kazakhstan in a foreign country or upon arrival to Kazakhstan at the international airports in Kazakhstan, possibility to obtain an investor visa for the period of 5 years and visa-free regime for citizens of certain countries for up to 30 calendar days
- Work permit exemption for foreign employees attracted by the AIFC participants

The AIFC also provides:

- Commercial and civil dispute resolution through the AIFC Court or the International Arbitration Centre
- An exchange platform – Astana International Exchange (“AIX”) – for corporations (listing), state bodies (bond issue) and retail and large investors interested in various financial instruments

AIX has immediately drawn the attention of foreign corporations due to the simplified procedures for providing financial services.

According to the AFSA procedures, one of the options for providing financial services on AIX involves acting as a recognized non-AIFC Member (“RNAM”) in the AIFC (i.e., a legal entity located in a jurisdiction other than the AIFC may apply to AFSA for an order declaring it to be an RNAM). The main advantage of obtaining the RNAM status is avoiding extra steps in the application procedure when a foreign business’s only intention is to obtain the status of a trading member of AIX.

Overview of tax rules in Kazakhstan

In the sections that follow, we outline the most significant taxes in Kazakhstan. There are a number of other (less significant) taxes, such as assets tax, land tax, payments for the use of various resources, such as radio frequencies, environmental taxes and a number of taxes on “subsurface users”, i.e., oil, gas and mining companies. It is important to do a thorough review of any proposed business activity to determine the actual taxes that apply to it.

Personal income tax (PIT)

Payers

Residents are taxed on their worldwide income. Non-residents are taxed on Kazakhstan-source income only, regardless of where it is paid. Income is deemed to be from a Kazakhstan’s source if it is derived from work performed in Kazakhstan. Kazakhstan-source income also includes interest income from residents and non-residents that have a permanent establishment in Kazakhstan as well as dividends from resident legal entities.

For tax purposes, individuals are considered residents if they are present in the country for at least 183 days in any consecutive 12-month period ending in the current tax year.

There is a separate investment residency program offered by the AIFC where individuals may qualify as the AIFC investment residents if they meet the program requirements and are present in the country for not less than 90 calendar days (including the days of arrival and departure) in any consecutive 12-month period ending in the current tax period.

Kazakhstan’s citizens and holders of residence permits are always considered residents of Kazakhstan if their center of vital interests is based in Kazakhstan. An individual is deemed to have his or her center of vital interests in Kazakhstan if all the following conditions are simultaneously met:

- The individual is a citizen of Kazakhstan or has permission to live in Kazakhstan on a permanent basis.
- The individual has a spouse or close relatives who reside in Kazakhstan.
- The individual and/or his/her spouse and/or members of his/her family own, or otherwise have at their disposal, immovable property in Kazakhstan that is permanently available for residence.

Double tax treaties may lay down different rules for determining tax residency.

Taxable income

The tax treatment of various types of income is described below.

Employment income

Income from employment consists of all compensation, whether received by an employee in cash or in kind (including the employee's shares), subject to minor exceptions, regardless of the place of payment of such income.

Under Kazakh law, any income paid for work performed in Kazakhstan (regardless of whether it is paid from inside or outside Kazakhstan) is deemed Kazakhstan-source income subject to statutory payroll taxation in Kazakhstan by the tax agent (i.e., a Kazakh entity or a branch or a representative office of a foreign entity responsible for calculating, withholding and remitting payroll-related taxes/social payments to the budget).

To comply with local requirements, host companies must maintain a "shadow" payroll for the taxation of income paid abroad for work done in Kazakhstan. "Shadow" payroll implies that foreign income is processed for Kazakhstan's tax purposes only, while the net payment is made by the home-country employer.

The companies that engage freelancers (not registered as individual entrepreneurs) are obliged to act as tax agents (as defined above) and withhold PIT from their income as well as pension and social health insurance contributions.

Self-employment and business income

Income of self-employed Kazakh citizens (individual entrepreneurs) is subject to income tax. Tax is levied on an individual's annual business income, which consists of gross income less expenses incurred in earning that income. To deduct expenses, individual entrepreneurs are required to be registered with the tax authorities and provide supporting documentation for the expenses. The tax rates for self-employment income are the same as those for employment income as shown in the "Rates" section, except for individual entrepreneurs who apply a special tax regime.

Investment income

Investment income is normally included in taxable income. The tax rates are shown in the "Rates" section.

Some types of investment income are tax-exempt (see the "Exempt income" section).

Exempt income

Certain items are exempt from tax, including the following:

- Business trip per diems within set limits and reimbursement of certain business trip expenses
- Accommodation and meal expenses within set limits for shift workers while they are at work
- Alimony
- Medical expenses within set limits
- Dividends on securities to the extent that at the date of accrual of such dividends such securities are officially listed on stock exchanges operating in Kazakhstan, provided that they were traded on the stock exchange in accordance with certain criteria during the calendar year
- Interest on securities if, when such interest is accrued, the securities are officially listed on stock exchanges operating in Kazakhstan
- Dividends within 30,000 MCI received from a resident legal entity for a calendar year
- Dividends and capital gains on shares held for over three years if certain other conditions are met

- Capital gains derived from securities that are listed on a stock exchange operating in Kazakhstan at the date of sale
- Interest income from deposits that is paid to tax resident individuals by licensed organizations in Kazakhstan
- Income from state securities of Kazakhstan

Capital gains

The Tax Code of Kazakhstan defines a capital gain as the difference between the sale price (disposal value) and the acquisition price (base cost), as supported by documents.

Income from the disposal of shares acquired through the exercise of a stock option equals the positive difference between the sale price and the acquisition price. The acquisition price includes the exercise price of the option and the option premium.

In the case of sales of property located in blacklisted low-tax jurisdictions, the taxable amount is the full sale price (i.e., the cost of acquisition is non-deductible).

Capital gains are subject to tax at the rates shown in the “Rates” section of this guide.

Since capital transactions of individuals are not sufficiently addressed in the current tax legislation of Kazakhstan, it is not possible for capital losses to be deducted from capital gains for tax purposes or for capital losses to be carried backward or forward to other tax periods.

Consequently, income recognized for tax purposes may significantly exceed income recognized in the financial statements prepared by a financial organization.

Controlled Foreign Company (CFC)

Tax resident individuals who directly, indirectly, or constructively control non-resident legal entities and/or other types of organizations, subject to certain conditions, are liable to pay 10% PIT on the CFC’s retained earnings and have separate tax reporting obligations. See the “Controlled Foreign Company (CFC) rules” section for more details.

Deductions

The taxable amount of a tax resident individual may be reduced by 14 minimum calculation indices (MCI)⁷, which is equal to KZT 51,688 (approximately USD 110) for 2024. If an employee’s taxable income for a particular month is below 14 MCI, the unused part of the deduction may be carried over to later months in the year. This does not apply when an individual changes workplace during a tax period, i.e., the individual may not offset an excess arising at the previous workplace against income earned at the new workplace.

Other deductions include the following:

- Compulsory pension fund contributions
- Compulsory employee social health insurance contributions
- Voluntary pension fund contributions made by an individual for his or her own benefit or by a tax agent under the pension law of Kazakhstan
- Documented medical expenses within the set limits
- Payments on mortgages with specific banks

⁷ Law No. 67-IV of the Republic of Kazakhstan On Transfer Pricing of 5 July 2008.

Income received in a foreign currency is converted into tenge at the exchange rate prevailing on the date of the actual payment.

Social tax

Social tax is payable by employers. It is an additional direct tax imposed on employers that is not reserved for the payment of social benefits to employees.

The tax base for social tax is the amount of compensation paid by the employer to its employees. There are several exemptions:

- Payments made by way of grants
- Compulsory pension fund contributions
- Compulsory employee social health insurance contributions

Employers must calculate social tax at a flat rate of 9.5% of gross earnings, less exempt amounts. The minimum tax base for social tax per employee is 14 MCI.

Monthly social tax liability is reduced by the monthly amount of compulsory social insurance contributions (see the “Social insurance contributions” section).

Social tax must be remitted to the state budget monthly by the 25th day of the month following the tax period.

Mandatory pension fund contributions

An employer must withhold and pay pension fund contributions monthly at a rate of 10% on the gross salaries of employees (local citizens, foreigners holding a residence permit, repatriated ethnic Kazakhs and employees who are citizens of the Eurasian

Economic Union member states (i.e., the Republic of Armenia, the Republic of Belarus, the Kyrgyz Republic, and the Russian Federation).

Pension fund contributions are not charged on monthly income in excess of 50 times the minimum monthly wage (KZT 4,250,000 / approximately USD 8,950 in 2024). Pension fund contributions are deductible for PIT, social tax and compulsory social insurance contributions purposes.

The Law of the Republic of Kazakhstan On Pension Provision also requires employers to pay additional professional pension fund contributions at their own expense for employees of certain occupations in 17 industry sectors, including mining, oil and gas, pharmaceuticals, and consumer goods manufacturing. The contributions are payable at a rate of 5% on the gross salaries of such employees.

Tax agents paying compensation to individuals under civil contracts are required, in addition to 10% PIT, to withhold and pay 10% pension fund contributions on the gross amount of that compensation.

Social insurance contributions

Employers must pay social insurance contributions, which form part of social tax, at a rate of 3.5% of income paid to employees (Kazakh citizens, foreigners holding a residence permit, repatriated ethnic Kazakhs and employees who are citizens of the Eurasian Economic Union member states).

In 2024, social insurance contributions are not charged on monthly income in excess of 7 times the minimum monthly wage (KZT 595,000 / approximately USD 1,250). Social insurance contributions are expected to be charged at a flat rate of 5% starting from 2025.

Mandatory social health insurance

Employers must make employer contributions to the Social Health Insurance Fund at a monthly rate of 3% of income paid to employees (applicable to Kazakh citizens, repatriated ethnic Kazakhs, citizens of the Eurasian Economic Union member states and foreign citizens holding a residence permit).

In addition to making employer contributions, employers are required to withhold employee contributions to the Social Health Insurance Fund from the income paid to employees (Kazakh citizens, repatriated ethnic Kazakhs, citizens of the Eurasian Economic Union member states and foreign citizens holding a Kazakhstan residence permit). These employee contributions are deductible for PIT and social tax purposes. Contributions are withheld at a monthly rate of 2% of an employee's income.

In 2024, income subject to employer and employee contributions to the Social Health Insurance Fund is capped at 10 times the minimum monthly wage (KZT 850,000 / approximately USD 1,790) per month.

Tax filing

Tax filing by tax agents

As mentioned above, any employment income, including benefits in kind, paid for work performed in Kazakhstan (irrespective of the place of payment) is taxed and reported by the local tax agent.

A tax agent is obliged to withhold PIT, pension fund contributions and employee social health insurance contributions monthly no later than the date on which the income is paid. PIT, pension fund contributions, professional pension fund contributions and employer and employee health insurance contributions are required to be paid no later than on the 25th day of the month following the month in which the employment income was paid. Social tax and social insurance contributions are paid by the 25th day of the month following the month in which the employment income accrued.

A tax agent is obliged to file a PIT and social tax declaration (Form No. 200.00) quarterly by the 15th day of the second month following the reporting quarter. The form also includes pension fund contributions, professional pension fund contributions, mandatory health insurance contributions and social insurance contributions.

There is also a special set of rules regulating the taxation of business travellers when a foreign service provider sends its employee to a customer in Kazakhstan for a short period of time. Basically, local legislation states that for up to 183 calendar days (establishment of Kazakhstan's tax residency status) each foreign individual must report salary attributed to working days in Kazakhstan, even just several days. For that purpose, each individual is required to obtain an Individual Identification Number in Kazakhstan and file a personal income tax return (Form No. 240.00) with the possibility of tax exemption (if there is a double tax treaty with Kazakhstan). If that threshold is exceeded, i.e., a foreign individual spent 183 or more calendar days in the country, the local customer will become liable for taxing the foreign employee's salary and maintain a shadow payroll (i.e., this mechanism implies that the local company takes salary paid outside Kazakhstan and processes it via local payroll for Kazakhstan's tax purposes). In this case, the local customer would need to obtain all supporting documents. Should it fail to obtain these documents, the local customer would be required to apply PIT to 80% of the service fee charged by the foreign service provider whose employees are coming to Kazakhstan.

Tax filing by individuals

Where there is no tax agent in Kazakhstan or special requirement of tax law, resident and non-resident individuals are responsible for calculating PIT obligations and filing a Kazakh tax return. The filing deadline for Kazakh tax returns is 31 March of the year following the reporting year, and any income tax liability must be settled within 10 calendar days after the filing deadline.

Kazakh tax returns must be filed by the following tax resident individuals:

1. Individual entrepreneurs
2. Individuals engaged in private practice, such as notaries, lawyers, and enforcement officers
3. Individuals who receive property income
4. Tax resident individuals who receive income not taxed at source in

Kazakhstan, including income from outside Kazakhstan

5. Tax residents who are Kazakh citizens, repatriated Kazakhs or individuals holding a residence permit and have the following types of property as of 31 December of the reporting year:
- real estate, if the real estate itself or rights thereto or transactions involving the real estate are subject to state or similar registration/reporting requirements under the laws of a foreign state
 - securities whose issuers are registered outside Kazakhstan
 - equity interests in legal entities registered outside Kazakhstan
 - cash on foreign bank accounts in excess of 2,000 times MCI as set in the reporting year
 - digital (crypto) assets

Administrative sanctions for individuals

Failure to submit a PIT return in time:

- First time: a warning
- Repeated violation within a year: a fine of 15 MCI (KZT 55,380 / approximately USD 115)

Concealment of taxable items:

- First time: a fine of 200% of tax payable on each concealed taxable item
- Repeated violation within a year: a fine of 300% of tax payable on each concealed item

Concealment of information about property outside Kazakhstan and funds in foreign bank accounts:

- First time: a fine of 100 MCI (KZT 369,200 / approximately USD 775)
- Repeated violation within a year: a fine of 200 MCI (KZT 738,400 / approximately USD 1,550)

Failure to pay tax and other mandatory payments owing to a failure to submit a tax return or the submission of a tax return with knowingly false information if this caused tax to be underpaid by more than 20,000 MCI (KZT 69,000,000 / approximately USD 144,000):

- A fine of up to 2,000 MCI (KZT 7,384,000 / approximately USD 15,550), or
- Correctional labor in the same amount, or
- Community service for up to 800 hours, or
- Restriction of liberty for up to 3 years, or
- Imprisonment for up to 3 years

Administrative sanctions for payroll violations

Understatement of taxes in tax returns: up to 50% of the understated amount of PIT and ST.

Non-withholding or incomplete withholding of taxes: up to 50% of PIT not withheld.

Failure to submit PIT returns in time:

- First time: a warning
- Repeat violation within a year: a fine of 70 MCI (KZT 258,440 / USD 545)

Failure to remit, withhold or pay mandatory pension fund contributions in full and in time:

- First time: a warning
- Repeat violation: up to 50% of the amount of contributions not remitted, withheld or paid in time

Failure to remit or pay social insurance contributions and mandatory health insurance contributions in full and in time:

- First time: a warning
- Repeat violation: up to 50% of the amount of contributions not paid or remitted in time

Concealment of taxable items:

- First time: a fine of 200% of tax payable for each concealed taxable item
- Repeat violation within a year: a fine of 300% of tax payable for each concealed item.

Corporate income tax (CIT)

CIT is imposed on the worldwide income of resident entities and Kazakhstan-source income of non-resident entities. The basic principles are consistent with those applied in most developed economies. However, the required standards of supporting documentation are particularly high in Kazakhstan.

Payers

Residents are taxed on their worldwide income, and non-residents are taxed on income from Kazakhstan sources. Non-residents doing business in Kazakhstan through a permanent establishment (PE) are taxed on the PE's profits, which are calculated in essentially the same way as for residents. Non-residents that derive Kazakhstan-source income otherwise than through a PE are taxed through withholding (see the "Withholding tax" section below).

For certain activities (sea freight shipping, bareboat charter and time charter services, screening of national films in cinemas, activities under priority investment projects or in special economic zones, etc.), CIT may be reduced by 100% (see the "Incentives for investors" section for details).

Taxable income

Taxable income is calculated as aggregate annual income after certain adjustments, minus statutory deductions. Aggregate annual income covers practically all forms of income, including capital gains.

Certain types of income are excluded from taxable income, including capital gains on shares of resident legal entities held for over three years if certain other conditions are met.

Deductions include all business-related and profit-oriented expenses plus a number of other minor items. In addition to normal operating expenses, examples of deductible expenses include interest (up to the thin capitalization limit or the amount actually paid for certain borrowings), foreign exchange losses, certain entertainment expenses (up to a limit of 1% of taxable payroll) and charitable expenses (up to 4% of taxable income). This list is not exhaustive. Losses from entrepreneurial activities and the sale of Group I fixed assets (such as buildings) may be carried forward over the following 10 calendar years inclusively and offset against taxable income for those years. Capital losses from the sale of securities and other non-depreciable assets may generally be offset against the corresponding capital gains (with certain exceptions).

Starting from 2023, the deductions for CIT purposes in respect of non-tangible services purchased from related non-resident entities registered in countries with preferential tax regime are capped to 3% of taxable income. The restriction applies to the acquisition costs of the following items: management, consulting, auditing, design, legal, accounting, advocacy, advertising, marketing, franchising, financial (except for interest expenses), engineering, agency services, royalties, and rights to use intellectual property items.

Tax depreciation

To qualify as a fixed asset for tax purposes, an item needs to be defined as such in the entity's IFRS accounts (with certain exceptions).

For tax depreciation purposes, fixed assets are split into four groups. Assets may be depreciated at any rate (stated in the entity's tax register) up to the maximum rates indicated in the table below.

The following items are not classed as depreciable fixed assets:

- Land
- Intangible assets with an indefinite useful life
- Construction in progress, etc.

Expenses actually incurred for the use, repair, maintenance and liquidation of fixed assets are defined as "subsequent costs" and are generally deductible in the tax period when they are actually incurred (unless capital in nature).

Tax legislation provides incentives in the form of tax depreciation allowances for fixed assets. For example, the value of production buildings and facilities, machinery and equipment that are brought into operation for the first time in Kazakhstan and are to be used in business activities for at least three years may be depreciated before the commencement of operation when construction expenses are incurred or in equal amounts over the first three years of operation. Capital costs for the modernization and reconstruction of such fixed assets may be deducted when they occur. These incentives do not apply to participants of special economic zones or producers of alcohol, tobacco or agricultural products or to assets used in subsurface development or priority investment projects. However, subsurface users may apply double depreciation rates to assets brought into operation for the first time, provided they will be used in business activities for at least three years.

| Group | Type of fixed asset | Maximum depreciation rate |
|-------|---|---------------------------|
| I | Buildings and structures (except for oil and gas wells and transminnion facilities) | 10% |
| II | Machinery and equipment (except for machinery and equipment for oil and gas production, computers and data processing equipment) | 25% |
| III | Computers, software and data processing equipment | 40% |
| IV | Fixed assets not included in other groups, including oil and gas wells, transmission facilities, and machinery and equipment for oil and gas production | 15% |

Tax rates and compliance

The standard rate of CIT is currently 20% of taxable income. In addition, in Kazakhstan, net income (after the deduction of CIT) of a non-resident's PE (branch) is subject to branch profit tax at a rate of 15%. This is usually reduced by tax treaties.

The tax period is a calendar year. The CIT declaration deadline is 31 March of the year following the reporting period. As a rule, all taxpayers (with certain exceptions) are subject to the CIT advance payment procedure, which requires them to estimate their tax liability for the year and pay tax in monthly instalments no later than the 25th day of the current month.

EY offers the following services with respect to CIT:

- Helping companies with all aspects of tax compliance
- Helping companies with obtaining tax preferences
- Providing tax accounting and risk advisory services
- Drafting and reviewing compulsory tax accounting policies
- Providing a comprehensive tax litigation service, including, where permitted, representation of taxpayers in court

Controlled Foreign Company (CFC) rules

Kazakh tax law sets out controlled foreign company (CFC) rules that affect Kazakhstan's taxation of groups ultimately owned by Kazakh residents. Under these rules, a Kazakh resident is obliged to report any CFC (as defined below) to Kazakhstan's tax authorities, and an appropriate part of the CFC's profit for the reporting period is subject to inclusion in the resident's aggregate annual income for Kazakhstan's income tax purposes (CIT or PIT, accordingly). The CFC rules prescribe certain deductions, exemptions and tools for the avoidance of double taxation.

The CFC concept under the Tax Code of Kazakhstan covers entities (legal entities and other forms of business activity, e.g., trusts) if (i) 25% or more of equity interests or shares are directly, indirectly or constructively owned by a Kazakh resident or if a Kazakh resident has direct, indirect or constructive control over the entity; (ii) the entity's effective tax rate is less than 10% according to the financial statements for the current and two previous periods, or if the entity (or any legal entity responsible for keeping accounts of its income and expenditures or managing its assets) is registered in a blacklisted jurisdiction. Under amendments to the Tax Code of Kazakhstan of 2021, the CFC concept does not apply to entities registered in the countries that have concluded a double tax treaty with Kazakhstan, provided that the nominal income tax rate in such a foreign country is more than 15%. The list of such countries is approved by the authorized body of Kazakhstan no later than 31 December of the year following the reporting period. Most recently, such list was published by the Ministry of Finance in June 2023 and included 43 countries.

Also, the CFC concept does not apply to foreign entities that are not registered in blacklisted jurisdictions, have the total income of less than approximately USD 1.1 million, and that are in a loss-making position or are owned by the AIFC participants.

Additional incentives are also envisaged, such as the exemption from taxation of CFC's profit, if:

- The share of its active income is at least 80%, or
- Any AIFC investment resident has direct and/or indirect ownership and/or control in a CFC

Some of the above relief measures are available retrospectively (e.g., from 2018, 2021).

The requirements for documentation of CFC tax exemptions are stringent and are often scrutinized by the tax authorities, but some incentives are also provided, such as the exclusion of certain types of "paper income" when calculating a CFC's financial profit.

Withholding tax (WHT) (other than PIT)

WHT applies to most types of Kazakhstan-source income paid to non-residents that are not registered for tax purposes in Kazakhstan and even to some who are unless due care is taken.

The list of income that is considered to be Kazakhstan-source income is established in the Tax Code. The rules are complex and inconsistent, and there are some cases in which WHT could apply to payments that involve no presence in Kazakhstan. It is vital to have a thorough understanding of how WHT may affect your business. There are also significant administrative requirements that must be met to enjoy benefits afforded by tax treaties.

Payers

Tax agents withhold tax from a non-resident's gross Kazakhstan-source income. Any tax-registered entity that pays Kazakhstan-source income is potentially a tax agent.

Taxable income

Taxable income includes (but is not limited to):

- Income of non-residents from the sale of goods or performance of work or services in Kazakhstan
- Income from management, financial (with some exceptions), consulting, engineering, legal (except for representation in court and provision of notary services) and auditing services performed outside Kazakhstan
- Any income of tax haven entities, regardless of where the underlying operations take place
- Capital gains on sales of shares or interests in Kazakh entities or foreign legal entities that derive most of their value from Kazakhstan
- Capital gains on sales of Kazakh property that is subject to registration

Certain types of income are exempt from withholding tax, including capital gains on shares held for over three years if certain other conditions are met. It is worthwhile mentioning that additional amendments were introduced and are effective from 2023 in respect of exemption from withholding tax on dividends – in particular, these provisions abolished previous exemption and replaced it with a 10% reduced rate (compared to statutory 15% as mentioned below) subject to three year holding period and certain other conditions.

Furthermore, in light of the recent changes to the Tax Code in 2023 and 2024 dividends and interest income of non-residents received from securities listed on the official list of stock exchanges operating in Kazakhstan (KASE and AIX) may be exempt if the “actively traded” criteria determined by the Government of Kazakhstan are simultaneously met.

Tax rates and compliance

| Type of income | Rate of WHT |
|--|-------------|
| Interest, dividends, capitel gains and royalties | 15% |
| Insurance premiums under insurance risk agreements | 15% |
| Income from international transportation services and insurance premiums under risk reinsurance agreements | 5% |
| Income of an entity registered in a tax heaven | 20% |
| Other income, including income from the provisions of services | 20% |

Most double tax treaties (DTT) concluded by Kazakhstan provide either for exemption from Kazakh WHT or for reduced WHT rates of 5% to 10% if certain conditions are met. However, these benefits are also subject to documentation rules laid down in the Tax Code. The rules are very specific as to the documentation required, and it is generally recommended that a tax agent should be in possession of the relevant documentation at the time the payment is made (or by the end of the tax year or 31 March of the following year at the latest) if treaty relief is to be applied. Otherwise, tax must be withheld in full, and the payer must subsequently claim a refund (which is a complex and time-consuming process with an uncertain outcome).

In addition, Kazakhstan introduced the Multilateral Instrument (MLI), which became effective as of 1 October 2020. However, some countries did not include DTTs with Kazakhstan in their MLI accession documents (e.g., Germany, Switzerland), while others did not sign/ratify the MLI at this time.

Kazakhstan has acceded to all minimum standards of the MLI. In terms of limitation of benefits, Kazakhstan adopted simplified limitation of benefits (SLoB), which may substantially limit the tax benefits for holding and financing structures using intermediary companies. However, since only a few countries (Russia, Slovakia, and India) decided to apply SLoB, most of Kazakhstan's DTTs will be subject to the principal purpose test (PPT) only.

At the same time, the Kazakhstan Tax Code introduced additional requirements for related foreign entities where applicable DTTs are subject to the MLI, in terms of the WHT exemption of payment for services as follows:

- I. income from the provision of services should not be exempt or deducted from such entity's taxable base or otherwise adjusted, and
- II. the nominal tax rate in the jurisdiction of its incorporation should be at least 15%.

Similar amendments with regards to distribution of dividends, royalties and interest income were introduced and are effective from 2023. However, their practical applicability is still subject to discussions. Given that from 1 January 2025 the new Tax Code is expected to be released, any amendments in these regards should be monitored.

WHT is reported and remitted by tax agents. The general time limits for remittance are as follows:

- For amounts accrued and paid, no later than 25 calendar days following the month in which payment was made
- For amounts accrued but not yet paid, if they are deducted for CIT purposes, no later than 10 calendar days after the filing deadline for CIT returns
- For prepayments, no later than 25 calendar days after the end of the month in which income was accrued to a non-resident

Under the Tax Code, tax agents must submit a WHT return by the following deadlines: (i) for Q1-Q3: no later than the 15th day of the second month following the quarter in which a WHT obligation arose, (ii) for Q4: no later than 31 March of the following year.

Value added tax

Payers and registration

All taxpayers registered for VAT purposes are required to charge VAT on their taxable supplies and calculate and report their VAT obligations.

Taxpayers are required to register for Kazakh VAT purposes if their total turnover in a calendar year exceeds 20,000 MCI (approximately USD 156,000).

The deadline for VAT registration is 10 business days after the end of the month in which the turnover threshold is exceeded.

Even if an entity is not required to register for VAT purposes, it may usually do so voluntarily by applying to the appropriate tax committee.

Deregistration

A VAT payer may apply for VAT deregistration if the following conditions are simultaneously met:

- Taxable turnover for the calendar year preceding the year in which the application is submitted did not exceed 20,000 MCI (approximately USD 156,000).
- Taxable turnover from the beginning of the current calendar year in which the application is submitted did not exceed 20,000 MCI (approximately USD 156,000).

The tax authorities will deregister the VAT payer without notification if (inter alia):

- The VAT declaration or the gambling business tax return is not submitted within six months after the due date established by the Tax Code.
- The VAT payer did not submit a written explanation of the reasons for being absent from the premises during a tax inspection.
- The sole founder or head of a legal entity or an individual entrepreneur is inactive, has unserved or unexpunged convictions, etc.
- The VAT payer is declared inactive.
- The registration (and re-registration) of the VAT payer is declared invalid by court.

VATable turnover

For a VAT payer, taxable turnover is the total value of supplies (sale, exchange, or gift) of goods, work and services and purchases of work and services from non-registered non-residents. A limited range of non-taxable and exempt supplies are excluded from this rule.

Definitions:

- For Kazakhstan's VAT, the term "goods" applies to practically any form of property or property rights.
- Taxable supplies of work or services are any supplies of work or services, both chargeable and free of charge, as well as anything that is done for consideration and is not a supply of goods.

A small number of transactions, such as transfers to a legal entity's charter capital, are treated as non-taxable.

Goods and services are VATable if, under the place-of-supply rules, they are deemed to be supplied in Kazakhstan.

The place-of-supply rules are broadly similar to the European Union rules; in particular, they treat some supplies that are made outside of Kazakhstan, such as consulting services, as made within Kazakhstan, and therefore taxable.

VAT rates

The standard VAT rate is 12%, but a 0% rate applies in the following cases:

- Export sales of goods
- International transportation services
- Sales of oil and lubricants by airports when fuelling aircraft and provision of ground handling services for a foreign air carrier engaged in international transportation
- Sales of certain goods into the territory of a special economic zone when the goods are to be wholly used for activities that meet the objectives of the special economic zone
- Sales of refined gold

Exempt supplies

Turnover and imports exempt from VAT include:

- Turnover relating to residential buildings
- Certain financial services
- Transfers of assets under finance leases (insofar as interest is concerned)
- Certain services rendered by non-profit organizations
- Certain services relating to culture, science and education
- Goods and services related to medical and veterinary activities
- Imports of certain assets included in a government-approved list
- Goods imported by individuals for other than entrepreneurial purposes (certain limits apply)
- Turnover relating to international transportation services
- Imports of goods from an EAEU member state within the same legal entity (intra-entity transactions)
- Imports of raw cane sugar
- Imports of chemicals (raw materials) for the production of pesticides under certain conditions specified by the Code
- Works of art imported by non-state museums in accordance with the list approved by the authorized body for culture in agreement with the central authorized body for state planning

- Goods, work, and services on a gratuitous basis as part of charitable assistance by a non-profit organization established in the form of a fund in accordance with the civil legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan
- Sale of refined gold and/or silver by entities producing precious metals to entities producing jewellery and other products

Offsetting of VAT

VAT paid on goods and services purchased by a VAT payer (i.e., input VAT), including reverse-charge VAT already paid and VAT paid at customs, may generally be offset (credited) when determining the taxpayer's VAT liability to the budget. However, no offset is granted for VAT incurred on supplies that are exempt or deemed to be made outside Kazakhstan.

VAT calculation and offset carry-forward

A taxpayer's VAT liability is calculated as output VAT (i.e., VAT charged by the taxpayer) minus input VAT (i.e., VAT paid by the taxpayer to its suppliers, reverse-charge VAT and import VAT) in the reporting period.

The amount by which input VAT exceeds output VAT may generally be carried forward against the future VAT liability. In practice, obtaining a refund (if eligible) is a time-consuming process, although there are special refund procedures for certain situations (such as continuous exports).

Non-recoverable input VAT

Input VAT on certain items cannot be offset. These include:

- Goods, work and services not related to taxable turnover
- Cars purchased as fixed assets
- Goods, work and services when a VAT invoice is issued that is not in compliance with the requirements of the Tax Code
- Goods and services purchased out of petty cash in an amount exceeding 1,000 MCI (approximately USD 7,800), irrespective of the frequency of payment
- Goods, work and services purchased from suppliers declared by court to be inactive entities
- Goods, work and services regarded by court as having been purchased by private business entities without actual intent to carry on entrepreneurial activities

VAT compliance

The tax period for VAT is a calendar quarter. The filing deadline for VAT returns is the 15th day of the second month following the reporting period. The VAT payment deadline is the 25th day of the second month following the reporting period.

Reverse charge VAT

Under the place-of-supply rules, certain services are deemed to be supplied in the location of the purchaser of the services (e.g., consulting, auditing, engineering, design, marketing, accounting, advocacy, information processing, etc.). Where such services are rendered by a non-resident not registered for VAT purposes in Kazakhstan, the Kazakh purchaser of the services is required to assess and pay VAT to the budget on its own (similarly to the reverse charge mechanism).

It is the obligation of a Kazakh purchaser of services to pay reverse charge VAT, which it should be able to offset against output VAT, subject to the general VAT offsetting rules.

EAEU

The Tax Code lays down certain procedures and compliance requirements for exports and imports of goods from/to Kazakhstan to/from the EAEU countries (Belarus, Kazakhstan, Russia, Armenia and Kyrgyzstan). Strict documentation and timing requirements apply (failure to observe these may result, for example, in the 0% VAT rate for exports to the EAEU countries being denied).

Import VAT on goods is payable by the importer at a 12% rate in Kazakhstan (certain exemptions apply).

A VAT return for imports of goods into Kazakhstan from other EAEU member states must be filed with the tax authorities, and the tax must be paid to the budget by the 20th day of the month following the tax period (month).

Electronic invoicing

Taxpayers are obliged to issue electronic VAT invoices for their transactions (with certain exceptions).

An electronic VAT invoice can only be issued using the official online system provided by the state revenue committee for the receipt and processing of electronic

VAT invoices. Electronic VAT invoices have a prescribed format and are signed using an electronic signature. Electronic invoices are normally issued within 15 calendar days after the date of a taxable transaction.

Electronic VAT invoices are also required for taxpayers not registered as VAT payers when: (i) goods are sold via the virtual warehouse module of the online system, and (ii) the value of the transaction exceeds 1,000 MCI (approximately USD 7,800).

Virtual warehouse

With effect from 1 January 2019, the “virtual warehouse” module was introduced in the official online system, and it is now obligatory for the reporting of goods included in a special list (e.g., motor vehicles, certain household devices, sugar, etc.). The “virtual warehouse” allows for the systematization of inventory accounting, automatic calculation of ending inventories and monitoring of the movement of goods from their entry into Kazakhstan until their sale to final consumers.

Electronic waybills

Electronic waybills should be issued upon movement, supply and/or shipment of certain goods. Starting from 1 April 2023, the production and turnover of certain goods (e.g., biofuel, ethyl alcohol, certain types of petroleum products, etc.) are subject to mandatory issuance of electronic waybills. The list of goods subject to mandatory issuance of electronic waybills is established by the authorities.

VAT obligations for non-residents engaged in the e-commerce sale of goods and providing digital services to individuals (B2C)

Non-resident entities engaged in the e-commerce sale of goods and providing digital services to Kazakh individuals (B2C) are subject to VAT in Kazakhstan. According to the legislation, such non-resident entities are required to be conditionally registered in Kazakhstan as VAT payers and pay VAT liabilities to the state budget of Kazakhstan. There is no threshold for conditional VAT registration of such non-resident entities in Kazakhstan. For the purposes of conditional VAT registration, non-resident entities engaged in the e-commerce sale of goods and providing digital services to Kazakhstan individuals (B2C) should send a confirmation letter with certain established details by post to Kazakhstan's tax authorities. Non-resident entities are obliged to pay VAT calculated on the value of goods sold in electronic form for each quarter no later than the 25th day of the second month following the quarter in which the goods were sold or the services were provided.

Non-resident entities engaged in the e-commerce sale of goods and providing digital services to Kazakhstan individuals (B2C) are generally not obliged to file VAT returns or issue VAT invoices.

EY offers help in identifying VAT risks and calculating VAT compliance costs, as well as assistance with cross-border VAT planning.

Subsurface use taxes

Please refer to EY's publications on the taxation of oil and gas and mining companies.

Tax administration

Kazakhstan has complex tax administration rules. Substantial fines and penalties may be imposed even for minor infringements.

Timing and frequency of the Tax Code's amendments

Administrative changes that benefit taxpayers may be adopted more often than once a year, but not later than 1 December of the current year. New tax obligations and other provisions that are, by their nature, disadvantageous for taxpayers may not be introduced retroactively.

Tax returns

Tax returns (declarations and calculations) are prepared by the taxpayer or the tax agent or by their representatives. Tax returns may be prepared on paper or electronically in the Kazakh or Russian languages.

Tax accounting policies

Tax accounting policies consist of a document adopted by a taxpayer/tax agent that regulates tax accounting in accordance with the Tax Code. All taxpayers/tax agents are required to have tax accounting policies.

Tax audits

Many taxpayers are audited, and it is vital to manage the tax audit process. Tax audits may take the following forms:

- Comprehensive audit
- Thematic (targeted) audit
- Cross-check audit
- Stopwatch overview

Tax audits may be divided into two types: periodic tax audits based on risk assessment procedures and unscheduled tax audits. The former type of tax audit may be initiated against taxpayers identified as high-risk profile entities based on semi-annual schedule approved by the competent authority. The competent authority publishes the semi-annual schedule of tax audits on its website before 25 December and 25 May.

Tax audits may cover any period within the statute of limitations. The statute of limitations is generally three years, except in the case of large business entities, subsurface users, and taxpayers subject to tax monitoring, for which the statute of limitations is five years. Tax audits can be intrusive and time-consuming and may sometimes even result in criminal proceedings, as discussed in the “Penalties and interest” section below.

For certain types of taxpayers – those that have investment contracts, are subject to tax monitoring or have a total additionally assessed tax liability in excess of 20,000 MCI (approximately USD 156,000 for 2024) – the tax authorities issue a preliminary tax audit report setting out the results of the tax audit. The taxpayer has the right to submit objections to the preliminary tax audit findings before the final tax audit report is issued.

Standard audit file

The standard audit file is a means for taxpayers to submit accounting data to the tax authorities online on a voluntary basis and enables a taxpayer's data to be analysed via the tax authorities' information systems. The submission of a standard audit file enables (i) a periodic tax audit based on risk management procedures to be conducted within 5 calendar days after the delivery of the tax audit order, and (ii) an unscheduled tax audit to be conducted within 10 calendar days after the delivery of the tax audit order.

Tax assessments

Upon completion of their tax audit, the tax authorities usually issue a tax audit report (if no tax violations are found, a statement to that effect is made in the report). Based on the findings of the report, the tax authorities issue a notification of taxes and other compulsory payments due to the budget, as well as any penalties and interest. The tax authorities also issue a statement of administrative offences committed, if any, indicating the amount of administrative penalties due.

Contesting the tax audit or cameral (in-house) control report

Tax audit report

After receiving the report on the tax audit, the taxpayer has 30 (thirty) business days to appeal the report. The appeal is filed with the Ministry of Finance of Kazakhstan.

In some cases, the Ministry of Finance may, after receiving the appeal, carry out additional tax control measures with a view to gathering additional evidence. If, after considering the appeal, the Ministry of Finance issues a decision that does not yield the desired outcome, the taxpayer may appeal it to the courts of Kazakhstan.

It is essential to point out that a court appeal may be filed even without the pre-appeal process described above. The time allowed for filing an appeal with a court of the first instance is 1 (one) calendar month after the date on which the taxpayer learned of the Ministry of Finance's decision on its appeal or after the taxpayer decides to appeal to the court.

Cameral (in-house) control report

Cameral (in-house) control is a part of the risk management system and is conducted upon issuance of all electronic VAT invoices and after the due date for filing tax returns.

Based on the results of cameral (in-house) control, the violations identified are divided into the following categories:

- High-risk violation
- Medium-risk violation
- Low-risk violation

A high-risk violation is the one identified as a result of cameral (in-house) control conducted after the issuance of all electronic VAT invoices for the tax period for the purposes of verifying the actual sales turnover.

After receiving the cameral (in-house) control report, the taxpayer has 30 (thirty) business days either: (a) to remedy violations specified in the report; or (b) to file an explanatory letter with the tax authority that issued the report. Also, if the violation is a high-risk one, such letter is required to be supplemented by supporting documentation.

Under tax legislation, a cameral (in-house) control report shall be deemed to be acted upon if the taxpayer files an explanatory letter as provided above. Requesting documents that are not related to the violations described in the cameral (in-house) control report is not allowed.

However, in practice, if the taxpayer decides to file an explanatory letter, the tax authority, after reviewing it, either voids the cameral (in-house) control report or issues a decision to recognize the cameral (in-house) control report as not acted upon.

If the report on a high-risk violation is not acted upon within 30 (thirty) business days or the tax authority decides to recognize a cameral (in-house) control report as not acted upon, the tax authority limits the issuance of electronic VAT invoices in the information system of electronic VAT invoices. Appealing the decision of the tax authority on the limitation of issuance of electronic VAT invoices does not suspend its enforcement.

In general, a decision to recognize a cameral (in-house) control report as not acted upon can be appealed to either (a) a higher tax authority (i.e., a local State Revenue Department); or (b) the Ministry of Finance, within 10 (ten) business days. If after reviewing the appeal, the above tax authorities issue a decision with which the taxpayer disagrees, the tax authority should initiate a targeted tax audit to review the underlying issue in greater detail. It should be noted that the tax authorities do not always initiate targeted tax audits in a timely manner.

Horizontal monitoring

Horizontal monitoring is a form of tax administration based on the principles of cooperation, reasonable trust, legality, transparency, and enhanced information exchange with the tax authorities.

In international practice, horizontal monitoring regimes (also known as “Cooperative Compliance”) have been implemented and are available for the largest taxpayers in more than 50 countries. In most of these, participation is voluntary.

Kazakhstan formally introduced horizontal monitoring in 2019, and it is currently at the pilot stage.

Participation in the horizontal monitoring at the pilot stage is mandatory for subsidiaries of State (National) holdings and voluntary for the largest taxpayers who meet one of the following criteria:

- Commercial organizations, except for state-owned companies, meeting both quantitative criteria at the date of application:
- The fixed assets value shall be at least 325,000 times the minimum monthly wage (approximately KZT 1 billion)
- The annual taxes payable shall be at least KZT 1 billion, or
- Taxpayers implementing priority investment projects
- Taxpayers with the status of operator or subsoil user

To be eligible for the horizontal monitoring regime, potential participants have to complete the following procedures:

- Identify and mitigate historical tax risks
- Implement an internal control system over tax processes
- Automate tax compliance and tax accounting
- Implement an information exchange system for sharing accounting and tax data with the tax authorities

If the specified criteria are met, the pilot horizontal monitoring project is implemented in 2 phases:

1. Pre-project

The pre-project phase is only applicable to voluntary participants in the pilot stage of horizontal monitoring and includes readiness assessment and implementation of the tax authorities’ recommendations on the elimination of historical tax risks, automation of tax compliance and tax accounting procedures, and improvement of the internal control system to achieve the required standard.

2. Pilot implementation of horizontal monitoring

As part of the horizontal monitoring at the pilot stage, participants are required:

- To ensure compliance of their internal controls with the requirements established by the tax authorities
- To provide the tax authorities with online access to documentation (information) disclosing tax records, including access to electronic data warehouse
- To provide access to IT systems with analytical tools that allow monitoring of the tax reporting accuracy

Whereas the pre-project phase does not allow participants to enjoy the benefits of the regime, at the pilot phase, a taxpayer gets the right:

- To apply a simplified procedure to refund excess VAT in the amount of 80%
- To obtain the tax authorities' recommendations regarding the correctness of fulfillment of its tax obligations

Upon successful completion of the pilot phase, participants of horizontal monitoring are entitled to the following additional benefits:

1. Release from tax audits for the periods of horizontal monitoring, except for:
 - Counter audits
 - Tax audits conducted at the request of a taxpayer (or a tax agent)

- Tax audits triggered by violations of the Criminal Code and the law On the Prosecutor's Office
- Tax audits conducted because of a taxpayer (or a tax agent) challenging tax audit results

2. The possibility to obtain advanced tax rulings on planned transactions (operations) from the state revenue authorities allowing to clarify uncertain tax positions
3. Simplified procedure to refund up to 90% of excess VAT (instead of 80%)

The pilot project was extended until 2025.

During the pilot phase, working groups consisting of participants of the horizontal monitoring program and the tax authorities develop the methodology and approaches to horizontal monitoring.

In particular, it is planned to include the concept of horizontal monitoring as part of the new Tax Code. It is also planned to develop regulations that will define:

- Requirements for the disclosure structure of tax reporting
- Technical requirements for information exchange with the tax authorities
- Disclosure templates for reporting forms in the internal control system for horizontal monitoring purposes
- Procedures for obtaining preliminary explanations on methodological tax issues.

Risk management system

The risk management system (RMS) is based on risk assessment and includes measures developed and applied by the tax authorities to identify and prevent risk, which is defined as the probability that damage will be caused to the state as a result of taxes not being paid in full.

The areas of application of the RMS are differentiated, with the following areas being highlighted:

- Selection of subjects (objects) of a periodic tax audit based on risk assessment
- Classification of taxpayers (tax agents) by assigning the categories of low, medium or high risk to them
- Confirmation of the amount of excess VAT
- Determination of the degree of risk of a violation identified by cameral (in-house) control
- Other forms of tax administration

The tax authorities group taxpayers into low-, medium- and high-risk categories by analysing tax reporting data, information provided by the state authorities and the local executive bodies and documents and/or other information relating to the taxpayer's business activities.

The non-confidential criteria of the RMS have been removed from the Tax Code and will be determined by the tax authorities within the framework of by-laws.

Penalties and interest

The Administrative Offences Code imposes administrative penalties for non-compliance with tax regulations, including the following:

- Under-declaration of taxes: 20% to 80% of the under-declared amount
- Understatement of an advance CIT payment by more than 20%: 20% of the understated tax
- Failure to withhold taxes: 20% to 50% of the non-withheld tax
- Concealment of taxable items: 200% of taxes payable on the concealed amount

Interest is charged on late tax payments at a rate equal to 1.25 times the National Bank's base rate of charge (currently 14.25%) for each day of the delay.

In addition, criminal liability applies to tax offences in Kazakhstan. EY as a member of the Foreign Investors' Council (FIC) chaired by the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan is actively involved in the de-criminalization of tax offences.

As part of this longstanding effort, EY and other FIC members proposed setting variable criteria for the state authorities to rely on when initiating criminal proceedings. As a result, a revised Article 3 of the Criminal Code entered into force, establishing thresholds for criminal liability under Article 245 of the Criminal Code. From September 2021, a criminal investigation is triggered if the amount of taxes and other mandatory payments to the budget accrued based on the results of a tax audit for the calendar year under review exceed: (a) 10% (ten percent) of the amount of all taxes and other mandatory payments to the budget calculated by the taxpayer for the calendar year, or (b) 50,000 or 75,000 MCI for the audited period.

From 2024, exemptions for economic crimes related to tax and accounting will come into force, for example:

- Violation of the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan on accounting and financial reporting will be decriminalized.
- Reduction of possible punishment for evasion of customs duties, customs fees, taxes, safeguard, anti-dumping, countervailing duties.

Tax evasion includes failing to submit a declaration, misstating income or expenditure data or concealing taxable items or the actual location of the taxpayer. Such violations trigger investigations by the Economic Investigation Service of the Financial Monitoring Committee and may even result in the prosecution of individuals who are thought to be responsible. Under the Criminal Code, individuals who have committed a tax offence are exempted from criminal liability if they voluntarily pay taxes and other amounts due to the budget and acknowledge that they are at fault.

Clarification letters and rulings

Clarifications

Taxpayers have the right to request clarifications of tax obligations, and the tax authorities are obliged to provide them. A taxpayer may apply to the tax authorities where it is registered or to a higher body if necessary (certain categories of taxpayers may apply to the Ministry of Finance). The tax authorities usually provide their opinion on specific tax queries in the form of a letter which is of an advisory nature and is not binding.

Rulings

The Tax Code also authorizes the Ministry of Finance to issue “advance rulings” on planned transactions when the following categories of taxpayers submit a request in the prescribed manner, accompanied by the relevant documents:

- Taxpayers that are subject to horizontal monitoring
- Taxpayers that have investment contracts for priority projects

The Ministry of Finance may refuse to issue an advance ruling.

Late-payment interest is not chargeable on tax assessments made as a result of a tax audit if the taxpayer fulfilled tax obligations in accordance with an advance ruling unless any new facts are established.

Administrative Procedural and Judicial Code

The purposes of the Code of Administrative Procedure and Proceedings are:

- Protecting the rights and freedoms of persons (individuals and legal entities) from illegal actions taken by the state authorities
- Establishing a procedure for appealing the outcome of a complaint

The Code replaces the law On Administrative Procedures and the law On the Procedure for Consideration of Appeals of Individuals and Legal Entities.

One of the Code's novelties is that it makes it possible to claim losses caused by the defendant (i.e., the state authority) related to the issuance of an administrative act or an administrative action (omission). Suits are to be filed with a specialized district court or an equivalent administrative court.

Overview of other laws that affect business administration

Transfer pricing

Kazakhstan's transfer pricing (TP) legislation has wide applicability to businesses.

TP rules apply to all cross-border transactions even if the parties are unrelated. TP rules also apply to certain types of domestic transactions if they are related to cross-border transactions, e.g., to domestic sales of hydrocarbons and minerals by subsurface users when such products are subsequently exported.

The TP law⁸ prescribes the following methods for determining market prices:

- Comparable uncontrolled price method
- Cost plus method
- Resale price method
- Profit split method
- Net margin method

As of 27 May 2024, the following changes were introduced into the TP law:

- Expanded coverage of transactions falling under the transfer pricing control
- New criteria for related parties based on economic dependence
- Expanded coverage of companies which are required to submit transfer pricing reports

- Improved provisions on transfer pricing methods
- Updated rules for calculation of the market range and tax adjustments

Except for transactions involving agricultural products, no “safe harbor” is allowed in terms of deviation from the market price, although the TP law recognizes that there may be a range of market prices. In determining market prices under the comparable uncontrolled price method, adjustments to prices are allowed in at least some cases, except where one of the parties to a transaction is registered in a tax haven.

There are several compliance requirements that apply to taxpayers, including subsurface users, depending on the type of the taxpayer and its revenues:

1. TP monitoring reporting (the deadline is 15 May of the year following the reporting year)

2. Notification of participation in a multinational group (before 1 September of the year following the reporting year)
3. Three-tier TP reporting, including:
 - Country-by-country reporting (within 12 months following the reporting year or upon request)
 - Master file (within 30 days upon request)
 - Local file (within 12 months following the reporting year)
4. General TP documentation (upon request)

EY's TP services include assistance in meeting all types of TP compliance requirements, help with reviews to identify TP risks and preparation of TP policies and procedures, assistance during TP audits and controversy, ad-hoc advisory and all other TP services.

Employment regulations

The Labor Code of Kazakhstan, which came into force in 2016, applies to employees and employers based in Kazakhstan, including branches and representative offices of foreign legal entities registered under Kazakh law.

Employment relations between an employee and an employer are regulated by an employment agreement. An employment agreement is concluded with each employee and reflects both the employee's and the employer's rights and obligations under the Labor Code. As a rule, an employee's rights under an employment agreement cannot be worse than those established by the Labor Code. It should be noted that the recent amendments to Kazakhstan's labor legislation allow for an employment agreement to be entered into and amended by means of an electronic document certified with an electronic digital signature.

Under the Labor Code, an employer is responsible for the proper execution of an employment agreement, which may be concluded for a fixed or indefinite term. An employment agreement may establish a probation period, which generally should not exceed 3 months. A longer probation period (up to 6 months) may be established for heads and deputy heads of organizations, chief accountants and deputy chief accountants and heads of branches and representative offices.

Kazakh labor law generally limits the working week to 40 hours. Under the Labor Code, total overtime must not exceed 120 hours per year: 2 hours per day (1 hour per day for employees engaged in heavy work or work in harmful and/or dangerous conditions) and 12 hours per month.

An employee's monthly salary cannot be lower than the minimum monthly salary established for the relevant financial year by Kazakh budget legislation. For 2024, the minimum monthly salary is KZT 85,000 (approximately USD 179). Salaries are denominated and paid in tenge only.

The minimum amount of paid vacation under the Labor Code is 24 calendar days. Additional vacation days are provided for employees working in dangerous or harmful conditions.

Maternity leave is from 126 to 163 calendar days (70 days before the birth of a child and from 56 to 93 days after the birth). Additional unpaid childcare leave may be provided to one of the parents until the child is 3 years old.

Kazakh law requires an employer to insure its employees against work-related injury within the first ten days of the month following the month in which the employee begins work.

The Labor Code provides for secondment arrangements, i.e., where the employee (seconded) performs work for another legal entity (its branches, representative offices and/or other subdivisions) or the branches, representative offices and/or other subdivisions of the same legal entity:

- I. in a certain sphere, skill area or position (function) specified in the employment agreement
- II. in another sphere, skill area or position (function), subject to certain restrictions imposed by law

The Labor Code limits secondment to the following cases and states that the host entity is required to be:

A legal entity (its branch, representative office and/or other subdivision) that is a founder, participant or shareholder of the employer and indirectly owns shares (participation interests in the charter capital) of the employer legal entity (i.e., the "parent" company)

A legal entity (its branch, representative office and/or other subdivision) whose shares (participation interests in the charter capital) directly or indirectly belong to the employer legal entity (i.e., a “subsidiary”).

A legal entity (its branch, representative office and/or other subdivision) whose shares (participation interests in the charter capital) directly or indirectly belong to an entity that directly or indirectly owns shares (participation interests in the charter capital) of the employer legal entity (i.e., a “sister” company).

Secondment for the following purposes is prohibited:

1. Replacement of employees of the receiving party who refused to perform work in cases and in accordance with the procedure established by Kazakhstan’s labor legislation
2. Performance of work in the event of downtime (temporary suspension of activities by the receiving party), implementation of a bankruptcy procedure by the receiving party, introduction of part-time work by the receiving party to retain jobs if there is a threat of employee dismissals

As an alternative, the Kazakh Labor Code provides for another secondment option, where a Kazakh legal entity engaged in providing staffing services (the seconding company) sends its employee to the host company to perform work for the host company as specified in an employment agreement or amendments thereto executed between the employee and the seconding company under the staffing services contract between the seconding company and the host company.

It should be noted that the amendments to the Kazakh Labor Code introduced a hybrid working model, meaning that, subject to consent reached between the employee and the employer, there may be an option to work from office or from home, provided that employment contracts reflect such an arrangement. Moreover, the Kazakh Labor Code allows an employer or an employee to send notifications in the form of electronic documents certified with an electronic digital signature by various means, including email and other electronic means ensuring authorization and identification of the employee or the employer.

In addition to the above-mentioned procedures for sending electronic notifications, the Kazakh Labor Code provides for the electronic execution of employment contracts and amendments to employment contracts (employment documents) using electronic digital signatures. It should be noted that employment documents can be executed with electronic digital signatures via online services for the execution of electronic documents that are compatible with Kazakhstani electronic digital signatures.

Employment contracts can be concluded:

- online, via the enbek.kz portal, including certification with electronic signatures of the employer and the employee
- on paper: each employment contract is registered by the employer in the state system

Employers are obliged to enter information on new employment contracts, employment contract terminations and amendments to the employment contracts (addendums) into the state unified information system of employment contracts within the established deadlines. Operations with employment contracts are carried out through the portal www.enbek.kz “Electronic Labor Exchange”.

Import and export formalities and customs duties

Customs regulation in Kazakhstan

Kazakhstan forms part of the unified customs territory of the EAEU along with Armenia, Belarus, Kyrgyzstan, and Russia. The EAEU, which came into being on 1 January 2015, allows the free movement of goods, services, capital and labor within its borders. The EAEU member states apply unified customs legislation and tariff and non-tariff regulations. There are various types of customs clearance procedures with distinct rules for the payment of customs duties and taxes, including release for internal consumption, temporary importation, reimport, customs (bonded) warehouse, free customs zone (for special economic zones and free warehouses) and other procedures.

Goods imported from third countries and cleared through the customs in an EAEU member state or produced/sufficiently processed in an EAEU member state may be moved within the EAEU without customs control/declaration.

Customs duties and classification of goods

The EAEU member states apply the common customs tariff to goods imported from third countries. This covers the classification of goods and the applicable rates of import duties. Import duty rates are expressed as a percentage of the customs value of goods, varying from 0% to 80%, or as a specific amount in USD/euro per unit of measure.

Each EAEU member state sets its own export duty rates for exported goods. Export duties should be calculated using the rates of the EAEU member state in which goods are placed under an export procedure. Export duty rates in Kazakhstan vary from 3% to 20% of the customs value or may be set as a specific amount in USD/euro per unit of measure.

Customs clearance fees are regulated by the domestic laws of the EAEU member states. In Kazakhstan, the customs clearance fee is 6 MCI (KZT 22, 152; approximately USD 46) per customs declaration.

Some customs procedures allow for the granting of full or partial exemptions from customs duties and taxes, e.g., to members of special economic zones, owners of free warehouses with special investment contracts, parties to investment contracts and in other cases. There are also certain non-tariff regulations, such as those limiting or prohibiting the import or export of certain goods.

Kazakhstan and the WTO

Import duties

On 30 November 2015, Kazakhstan became the 162nd member of the WTO. According to its schedule of concessions, Kazakhstan undertook to reduce import duties by 2%-5% for nearly 3,900 items, and to 0% for some items, within five years after its accession to the WTO.

As part of recent amendments to the EAEU's legislation, Kazakhstan approved a full list of goods (almost 3,900 items) to which reduced rates of import duty may be applied. Under the EAEU's legislation, goods included in this list that have been imported at reduced rates under the customs procedure of release for domestic consumption have the status of conditionally released goods and cannot be exported to other EAEU member states.

Export duties

Kazakhstan reserved the right to continue levying export duties on certain goods that are currently subject to export duty in Kazakhstan (petroleum and related products, remnants and scrap of ferrous and non-ferrous metals, elements of locomotive rolling stock, wool and hides of domestic animals, etc.).

On its accession to the WTO, Kazakhstan undertook to begin calculating the export duty rate for crude oil using a formula based on the monthly average market price of crude oil.

Licensing

Licenses for certain activities

Kazakh licensing legislation classifies permits/licenses based on the risk level of activities to be carried out:

- High-risk activities require licenses referred to as the “first-category permits”
- Medium-risk activities require permits referred to as the “second-category permits”
- Low-risk activities require the relevant government authority to be notified of the commencement/completion of activities

An exhaustive list of activities requiring licenses, permits or notifications is contained in the law On Permits and Notifications and includes 70 licenses, 175 permits and 53 notifications.

The range of business and professional activities that require permits/licenses is extensive. It is important for investors to determine in advance whether any license, permit or notification is needed. Kazakh law imposes various types of liability and substantial penalties for a failure to comply with permit/license regulations.

A licensing authority is required to issue a permit/license within 15 business days after the application is submitted with all required supporting documents (except for certain permits/licenses subject to different rules), provided that the applicant meets the relevant requirements. If the applicant does not meet the requirements or fails to provide supporting documents, the licensing authority may issue a substantiated refusal. In this case, the applicant may adjust the application and supporting documents and re-apply. Since the law does not limit the number of submissions, this process may take considerable time.

A permit/license may be revoked or suspended for an administrative offence committed in carrying out the activities authorized by the permit/license.

Revocation is imposed by a judge or an authorized body. The period of suspension of a permit/license may not be less than one or more than six months.

It should be noted that on 30 December 2021, the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan signed the law On Amendments and Additions to Certain Legal Acts of the Republic of Kazakhstan Concerning the Implementation of a New Regulatory Policy in the Sphere of Entrepreneurial Activities and Redistribution of Certain Functions of the Internal Affairs Bodies of the Republic of Kazakhstan. According to these amendments, the state implemented the so-called “1 IN 2 OUT” principle, when a new requirement can only be introduced if two existing requirements are excluded. This principle is aimed at reducing excessive regulation and administrative costs of business entities. The detailed regulation of the above principle is set out in Article 82 of the Entrepreneurial Code.

Below we present a summary of the most common types of licenses in Kazakhstan.

Construction licenses

These are divided into three categories, depending on the complexity of facilities to be assembled and/or constructed. To obtain a license for assembly and/or construction work, the applicant is obliged to meet all qualifying requirements approved by the Government of Kazakhstan. To obtain a first- or second-category license, the applicant is required to have 10 or 5 years of experience in assembly, engineering and construction, respectively. No experience is required for a third-category license.

Please note that foreign companies entering the Kazakh market may apply for the first- or second-category licenses if they have the necessary experience. However, they are obliged to apply via duly registered branches in Kazakhstan. A foreign subsidiary in the form of a newly established LLP would be regarded as a separate legal entity, and therefore no foreign experience would be recognized. Such an entity may apply only for a third-category license.

Import/export licenses

The government establishes a list of goods whose import/export is subject to licensing. A license is issued for each item of goods and is granted within 30 business days after an application is received. The following types of licenses are issued:

- A general license, which is issued to a foreign trade participant based on a decision of an EAEU member state and allows a certain item of goods to be exported or imported in the quantity indicated in the license
- An exclusive license, which grants a foreign trade participant an exclusive right to export or import certain goods
- A one-time license, which allows a foreign trade participant to export or import a specified quantity of goods under a foreign trade agreement

The holders of import/export licenses are required to submit a report on the use of the license to the appropriate authorities. Permit and license applications and notifications may be submitted online via www.elicense.kz.

Banking regulations

Banking system

National Bank of Kazakhstan (NBK)

Kazakhstan has a two-tier banking system. The first tier is the NBK, which is the country's central bank. The NBK provides traditional banking services to its main client, i.e., the state, as represented by its central authorities. On the other hand, it carries out currency regulation and exercises currency control, is responsible for the development and implementation of the monetary policy, functioning of payment systems, and, within its competence, carries out state regulation and supervision of the financial market.

Agency for the Regulation and Supervision of the Financial Market and Financial Organizations

The Agency is a special government authority directly subordinate and accountable to the President of Kazakhstan. It performs state regulation and supervision of the financial market and financial organizations, including second-tier banks.

Second-tier banks

The second tier includes all banks, except for the NBK and the Development Bank of Kazakhstan, which has a special legal status. One of the features of the Kazakh banking system is that only private banks operate on the banking services market. The Development Bank of Kazakhstan and the Housing Construction Savings Bank, both with state shareholdings, have special status and perform specific functions in the financial sector to serve national interests. As a rule, banking operations in Kazakhstan is subject to licensing by the Agency. Foreign banks have operated in Kazakhstan since 1993. Since 16 December 2020, foreign banks have been allowed to open branches in Kazakhstan, provided that specific financial and regulatory conditions set by Kazakh law are met, including the provisions of the Tax Code.

Islamic banking

Islamic banks are also allowed to operate in Kazakhstan, subject to restrictions laid down in Kazakh law. Since the government recognizes the potential of Islamic finance in Kazakhstan, specific provisions for Islamic finance are envisaged at the legislative level (including the Tax Code). Islamic banking is subject to licensing by the Agency and generally should be Shariah compliant. Islamic banks cannot participate in the Kazakh deposit insurance system, and an Islamic bank's deposits cannot be insured by the Kazakh deposit insurance system.

Currency regulations

On 2 June 2018, the President of Kazakhstan signed Law No. 167-VI On Currency Regulation and Currency Control (the "Currency Control Law"). The law came into force on 1 July 2019.

The Currency Control Law imposes certain formal requirements but does not impede most international business operations.

It distinguishes between the following parties to currency transactions:

- Kazakhstan's residents, i.e., (i) Kazakh citizens (other than those who have permanent residency abroad); (ii) foreigners and stateless persons who have a permanent residence status in Kazakhstan; (iii) legal entities registered in Kazakhstan, Kazakhstan-based branches/representative offices of such entities and diplomatic, trade and other official missions of Kazakhstan located abroad; (iv) branches of foreign financial organizations which have the right under Kazakh law to engage in banking or insurance activities in Kazakhstan (from December 2020); and (v) branches of foreign non-financial organizations which are treated as permanent establishments of those organizations in Kazakhstan (except for branches and representative offices whose non-resident status is stipulated in international treaties concluded by Kazakhstan prior to the entry into force of the Currency Control Law)

- Kazakhstan's non-residents, i.e., (i) foreign citizens and stateless persons (other than those who have a permanent residency status in Kazakhstan); (ii) foreign legal entities and organizations not recognized as legal entities under the laws of foreign states and Kazakhstan-based branches/representative offices of such entities that do not give rise to a permanent establishment of a non-resident under the Tax Code of Kazakhstan; (iii) branches/representative offices of foreign non-financial organizations that have been assigned a non-resident status under Kazakh currency law by agreements that were concluded on behalf of Kazakhstan with foreign organizations and entered into force before 1 July 2019 (the list of such branches/representative offices is to be established by the Government of Kazakhstan); (iv) international organizations, unless otherwise specified by the international treaty governing their establishment; (v) and diplomatic and other official missions of foreign states

Individuals (residents and non-residents) may send and receive foreign currency in cash to and from Kazakhstan without restrictions, subject to the customs legislation of the EAEU and/or Kazakhstan. In accordance with Decree No. 830 of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan of 14 March 2022 On Measures to Ensure the Financial Stability of the Republic of Kazakhstan, it is forbidden for individuals (residents and non-residents) to export foreign currency from the Republic of Kazakhstan in cash and/or monetary instruments in foreign currency in an amount exceeding the equivalent of USD 10,000 (ten thousand) and calculated at the rate of the National Bank of the Republic of Kazakhstan on the date of such export.

The Currency Control Law states that transactions between Kazakhstan residents and non-residents may be carried out in any currency. However, transactions between residents are allowed only in KZT, except for:

- Transactions where one of the parties is the NBK, the Ministry of Finance or an overseas diplomatic office of Kazakhstan
- Transactions where one of the parties is a resident that has the right to conduct foreign currency transactions
- Foreign currency transactions classified as banking operations and other operations which banks and authorized organizations have the right to carry out under a license issued by the NBK or the Agency for the Regulation and Supervision of the Financial Market and Financial Organizations or under Law No. 262-VI of the Republic of Kazakhstan of 3 July 2019

- Payment for banking services related to foreign currency transactions
- Transactions involving the acquisition, sale, payment of interest on and/or redemption of securities denominated in a foreign currency
- Transactions between commission agents and their clients when services rendered by commission agents involve the conclusion and execution of export or import contracts with non-residents, including the repayment of amounts in a foreign currency to the principal
- Purchase and/or sale of refined gold bullion using the national currency
- Transfer of promissory notes denominated in a foreign currency in fulfillment of monetary obligations
- Payments for goods sold in duty-free shops and for goods and services provided to passengers in international traffic
- Transactions between branches (representative offices) of foreign entities
- Transactions involving the payment of an individual's expenses in connection with a business trip outside the Republic of Kazakhstan, including hospitality expenses, and transactions involving the repayment of unused advances issued in connection with a business trip outside Kazakhstan
- Gratuitous transfers of money or currency valuables by individuals to other individuals or to legal entities whose statutory activities involve charity
- Bank deposits by individuals in favor of other individuals
- Transactions between professional participants in the securities market acting on behalf of their customers and individuals or legal entities involving the transfer of money and financial instruments from/to accounts for the recording and storage of money and financial instruments owned by customers by way of the performance and termination of contracts for brokerage services

The range of currency transactions covered by the NBK's monitoring system has expanded, with simplified procedures introduced for the collection of transaction data. For monitoring currency transactions, the NBK (or authorized banks in certain cases) assigns registration numbers to currency contracts under which currency transactions take place, currency contracts involving the movement of capital, accounts held by residents (excluding banks and branches/representative offices of foreign entities) with foreign banks and export or import currency contracts where payments are made through such accounts.

Authorized banks that process foreign currency payments or transfers are required to notify the NBK of transactions for an amount equalling or exceeding a threshold set by the NBK. The NBK is entitled to request a copy of the currency contract and information on the currency contract from the currency control agents or the resident sender. Please note that various ancillary regulations are currently being drafted.

Currency regimes

Registration of foreign currency contracts involving capital movement

According to the Rules for Monitoring of Currency Transactions, approved by Resolution No. 64 of the Board of the National Bank of 10 April 2019 (the “Rules”), the NBK is responsible for monitoring and registering currency transactions and currency contracts.

Registration is required for currency contracts involving capital movement (financial loans, equity participation, transactions involving securities, equity interests and financial instruments, acquisition of real estate, acquisition of exclusive rights to intellectual property, transfers of funds in the context of trust management, and gratuitous transfers of funds) where one of the parties is a resident and the contracts reach certain thresholds.

According to the Rules, a capital movement currency contract is subject to registration when it involves:

1. The receipt of property/money in the Republic of Kazakhstan and/or a resident's obligation to return to a non-resident property/money with a value exceeding the equivalent of USD 500,000 (five hundred thousand) (approximately KZT 237,500,000)

2. The transfer of property/money from the Republic of Kazakhstan and/or a non-resident's obligation to return to a resident property/money with a value exceeding the equivalent of USD 500,000 (five hundred thousand) (approximately KZT 237,500,000)

A resident (other than an authorized bank and a branch/representative office of a foreign entity) that is a party to a currency contract is required to apply to the NBK before obligations under the contract are fulfilled by any parties.

Non-residents may receive and transfer foreign currency from/to their branches (representative offices) in Kazakhstan.

The registration requirement does not apply to capital movement currency contracts whose parties include the NBK or the Ministry of Finance or to currency operations carried out by the participants of the Astana International Financial Centre within the Centre's territory.

Notification

The notification regime requires that the NBK is provided with the information on foreign currency transactions exceeding the threshold of USD 50,000 (KZT 23,750,000) and on the opening of bank accounts with a foreign bank (for legal entities) as well as the information on the purchase and sale of foreign currency on behalf of a client, regardless of the amount.

Repatriation

A Kazakh resident is obliged to ensure that the currency proceeds under the export or import contracts are repatriated to Kazakhstan (i.e., credited to a bank account with a local bank) within the established time limit.

According to the rules for carrying out export-import currency control approved by Resolution No. 42 of the National Bank of 30 March 2019, from 1 July 2019 an export or import currency contract is subject to registration if the amount of the contract exceeds the equivalent of USD 50,000 (KZT 23,750,000) or if the contract amount is not specified (framework agreements).

If an export or import currency contract is denominated in a currency other than USD and the exchange rate against the USD is not specified in the contract, the USD equivalent of the contract amount should be determined using the market exchange rate at the contract's signing date (or, failing that, at the date of the contract's entry into force).

Currency contracts that do not specify their amount or have the amount exceeding USD 50,000 (KZT 23,750,000) and that are amended after 1 July 2019 are subject to registration before one of the parties starts to fulfill its obligations, but not later than 30 calendar days after the date on which the currency contract became subject to registration.

Late registration of currency contracts concluded after 1 July 2019 will incur a warning in the first instance. A repeat violation within a year will incur an administrative fine of 100 MCI (Administrative Offences Code, Article 244). In 2024, the fine amounts to KZT 369,200 (approximately USD 777).

The repatriation requirement is deemed to be partially or fully satisfied when:

- A national and/or foreign currency amount is credited to accounts held by a resident with foreign banks that were opened to fulfill the resident's obligations under the terms of a financial loan received from a non-resident or to support the activities of branches/representative offices opened by the resident abroad
- A foreign currency amount received by residents from exhibitions and sporting, cultural and other similar events held outside the Republic of Kazakhstan is used to cover costs incurred during those events
- Foreign currency earnings are credited to foreign bank accounts of resident transportation companies in order to pay port dues and other charges outside Kazakhstan and cover expenses associated with the handling of those companies' transport facilities and passengers outside Kazakhstan and the maintenance of branches/representative offices of those companies outside Kazakhstan
- An obligation of a non-resident is terminated by crediting a counterclaim under an export or import currency contract
- An obligation of a non-resident is terminated by the replacement of the original obligation between a resident and a non-resident with another obligation between the same parties with a different subject matter or method of performance
- An insurance payment is received upon the occurrence of an insured event under an agreement on insurance of the risk of non-performance by a non-resident

Withdrawal of money from the Republic of Kazakhstan and evasion of fulfilling the requirements of the currency legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan

The following currency transactions can be potentially considered as money withdrawal, as well as evasion from fulfilling the requirements of the currency legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan (the "Currency transactions"):

1. Financial loans, covering a non-resident providing money to a resident, or a resident having claims against a non-resident for a refund (save for an authorized bank), if the agreement does not provide for a money transfer to be done by a non-resident to a resident's bank accounts in authorized banks; a resident providing money to a non-resident, (i) who owns 10% or more of voting shares/votes of the members of a resident legal entity, or (ii) where a resident owns 10% or more of voting shares/votes of the members, or (iii) which, together with the resident, is under control of a third party, if the terms of the relevant currency agreement do not provide for the remuneration for the use of the financial loan

2. Import/export transactions, if the terms of the relevant currency agreement provide that the term for the fulfillment of obligations by a non-resident (i) to pay for exports, (ii) to supply goods (perform work, provide services)/return money, including advance payment or prepayment in full, exceeds 720 days from the date the resident fulfills the obligations
3. Transfer of money by a resident in the amount exceeding USD 50,000 or its equivalent to (i) own account abroad (ii) a non-resident who is a professional securities market participant, conducting foreign exchange on behalf of clients, (iii) a non-resident on a gratuitous basis
4. Payments and/or money transfers carried out by one person per calendar month under two or more currency agreements with the same non-resident, for a total amount exceeding USD 50,000 or its equivalent

Submission of information (reports) by branches (representative offices) of foreign non-financial organizations

According to the Rules on the Submission of Information by Branches (Representative Offices) of Foreign Non-Financial Organizations, approved by Resolution No. 41 of the National Bank of 30 March 2019, from 1 July 2019 branches/representative offices of foreign non-financial organizations that have operated in the Republic of Kazakhstan for more than one year are obliged to submit information (reports) on their activities to the National Bank.

Based on the information received, the local branches of the National Bank compile the list of branches/representative offices that provide information on transactions with residents and non-residents.

That list includes branches/representative offices engaged in the following activities:

1. Production of crude oil and natural and associated gas
2. Construction services
3. Services related to mining
4. Architectural, engineering and other technical services
5. Research and development

Late submission of a report incurs a warning in the first instance. A repeat violation within a year will incur an administrative fine of 10 MCI. In 2024, this amount is KZT 36,920 (approximately USD 77).

In addition, if a branch or a representative office of a foreign non-financial organization submits an incomplete and/or inaccurate report on transactions with residents and non-residents, it will receive a warning for the first time. A repeat violation committed within a year will incur an administrative fine of 10 MCI, which currently amounts to KZT 36,920 for 2024 (approximately USD 77).

Foreign currency sale and purchase

Legal entities may buy and sell foreign currency amounts on the domestic currency market only through authorized banks.

A resident legal entity may purchase non-cash foreign currency in the equivalent of up to USD 50,000 (inclusive) in one bank on one day for purposes not related to the discharge of obligations expressed in a foreign currency. “The purposes not related to the discharge of obligations expressed in a foreign currency” include: (i) the foreign currency transfers to a foreign bank account owned by such a resident legal entity; (ii) the free-of-charge bank transfers; and (iii) the foreign currency transfers to such entity’s bank accounts in Kazakh banks.

For amounts exceeding the equivalent of USD 50,000, a resident legal entity is required to indicate the reason for purchasing the foreign currency and provide a copy of the underlying contract or invoice (any payment document) to support the reason for purchasing the foreign currency. A resident legal entity must also provide an advance instruction to its servicing bank to sell the foreign currency (i.e., convert it to Kazakhstan tenge) if such foreign currency is not utilized within 10 (ten) business days.

This restriction does not apply to authorized banks or authorized organizations. Individuals may buy and sell currency through foreign currency exchange offices.

Special currency regime

The Currency Control Law authorizes the Government of Kazakhstan, upon recommendation of the National Bank and relevant government authorities, to introduce a special currency regime in the event of a threat to the economic security and the domestic currency market of Kazakhstan.

A special currency regime may include, among other things, a requirement for a percentage of the amount of a currency transaction to be deposited with an authorized bank without interest, a requirement to obtain a special permit from the NBK to carry out currency transactions, mandatory sale of foreign currency received by Kazakhstan residents, restrictions on the use of foreign banks and limits on settlements in foreign currency.

Financial monitoring

It is important to consider the possible implications of the financial monitoring system established by Law No. 191-IV of the Republic of Kazakhstan of 28 August 2009 On Countering Money Laundering and the Financing of Terrorism (the “Anti-Money Laundering Law”). Under that law, certain types of transactions are subject to financial monitoring, depending on the amounts involved. This includes gratuitous payments and/or transfers made by individuals and legal entities in favor of other individuals or legal entities amounting to KZT 7,000,000 (approximately USD 14,735) or more, transactions with a value of KZT 10,000,000 (approximately USD 21,053) or more entered into by legal entities that have existed for less than three months, and other operations and transactions specified in the Anti-Money Laundering Law.

Monitoring is conducted by the Financial Monitoring Committee of the Ministry of Finance of Kazakhstan.

In addition, the Anti-Money Laundering Law contains the term “suspicious transaction”, meaning a transaction or attempted transaction where there are grounds to suspect that money and/or property used in the transaction is derived from criminal activity or that the transaction itself is undertaken for the purpose of money laundering or financing of terrorism or other criminal activity. The Government of Kazakhstan establishes the list of criteria for characterizing transactions as suspicious, such as a transaction's inconsistency with the nature of a legal entity's business as specified in its constituent documents, transactions with non-profit organizations, transactions relating to charitable activities, etc. Furthermore, any transaction may potentially be considered suspicious if an authorized person of a financial monitoring agent decides to treat it as such based on his/her experience and knowledge.

Anti-monopoly regulations

Anti-monopoly law requires prior permission from or notification of the anti-monopoly authority for mergers and other types of economic concentrations where the total book value of the entity's assets exceeds 10,000,000 MCI (KZT 36,920,000,000; approximately USD 77,726,316); otherwise, the deal may be invalidated or terminated.

Anti-monopoly law also prohibits anti-competitive horizontal agreements (cartels) and vertical agreements, concerted practices, abuse of a dominant market position and unfair competition. All types of monopolistic activity (i.e., anti-competitive agreements, concerted practices, abuse of a dominant position) may entail administrative fines of up to 5% of income with confiscation of the monopolistic income for a period of up to a year, or criminal sanctions if actions result in major damage or the receipt of substantial income. Unfair competition entails an administrative fine of up to 1,500 MCI (KZT 5,538,000; approximately USD 11,659).

Subsurface use regulations

From 29 June 2018, subsurface use in Kazakhstan is regulated by the new Subsurface Use Code. The Subsurface Use Code establishes different regulatory regimes for subsurface companies depending on the types of mineral resources being explored and produced.

Subsurface use rights are granted for the exploration and production of hydrocarbons based on the contracts concluded by the competent government authority with the winners of the auctions, which are determined by the amounts of subscription bonuses proposed by the auction participants. Since 1 September 2020, such auctions have been held online.

The Subsurface Use Code also envisages the right of the competent government authority to conclude contracts for exploration and production of hydrocarbons and uranium through direct negotiations with national companies of Kazakhstan.

Subsurface use rights are granted for exploration and production of solid mineral resources based on the licenses issued by the competent government authorities. Such licenses are issued on a first come, first served basis, meaning that all applications for licenses for exploration and production of solid mineral resources within the same block are considered in the order in which they are received, and each application is considered only after the preceding application has been rejected.

Under the Subsurface Use Code, the acquisition of subsurface use rights from subsurface use companies (e.g., farmouts) or the purchase of shares/participating interests in subsurface use companies is subject to approval by the competent government authority. Furthermore, where such acquisition relates to a subsurface area of strategic importance, the government has the right of first refusal over the rights or shares/interests being sold. Therefore, before subsurface sites can be acquired, it is necessary to obtain approval from the competent government authority and a waiver from the government confirming that it will not exercise its right of first refusal over the sites.

On 1 January 2022, a new concept of an “agreement for promoting entrepreneurship” was introduced into the Subsurface Use Code. Such agreements are signed by the government authorities in the sphere of hydrocarbons, uranium mining and solid minerals with the National Chamber of Entrepreneurs of Kazakhstan and subsurface users on a voluntary basis and are aimed at supporting local producers.

Performance under such an agreement is monitored and the results are published on Internet resources by the National Chamber of Entrepreneurs of Kazakhstan in cooperation with the government authorities in the sphere of hydrocarbons, uranium mining and solid minerals, based on the information provided by subsurface users through the system.
